ALREWAS, England (AP)—A little old lady who was cut off from her children 38 years ago has taken home a rusty but cherished baby carriage which cost her $376 in storage fees during the last 18 years.

She is Mrs. Hannah Smith, 72, whose sad eyes dimmed with tears as she told how the carriage was all she had to remember the three sons she hasn't seen since 1926.

Mrs. Smith's story was disclosed when British railways officials decided to close Alrewas station. They said a carriage stood for 18 years in the dusty depot at a monthly charge of £1 ($3) would have to be picked up.

"All my children used the pram (carriage)," Mrs. Smith said. "I just haven't been able to part with it—and I never will."

Mrs. Smith told this story to reporters:

In 1926, she was living in the Derbyshire village of Overlough with her husband, Fred, a miner, and their children—Mabel, 7, George, 5, Percy, 3, and James, 1. One day, Mabel was killed by a bus. Smith blamed his wife for the accident and ordered her out of the house.

"All I had was the pram and a few belongings, including my silver thimble, and a mirror. From that day to this, I have never set eyes on my children."

For the next 12 years, Mrs. Smith roamed about, picking hops, or potatoes, or working in the hotels. Everywhere she went, she pushed the pram.

An attempt at reconciliation failed and finally, 18 years ago, Mrs. Smith settled down. With no room at her lodgings, she put the carriage into storage.

Space Signal Received

STOCKHOLM (Reuters)— Finnish radio stations Wednesday night picked up signals on a frequency used by Russian spacecraft, it was reported here.

There have been persistent rumors in Moscow that a group of three cosmonauts will be launched into space in the near future.

Rebels Tell Consul To Leave Town

U.S. Aid Sped To Congo

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four big U.S. transport planes with 50 paratroopers riding shotgun headed for Leopoldville Wednesday as the United States again began to step up its aid to the Congo.

Coinciding with this Pentagon announcement, word reached the state department that victorious Communist-backed rebels have ordered the American consular staff out of Stanleyville, a major city in the eastern Congo.

Rebel "General" Nicholas Olgan announced that his forces could not guarantee the safety of Americans and Belgians in the area.

their territory following the U.S.-Belgian agreement to increase aid to the Leopoldville government.

CALL FOR AID

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman reported to a closed session of the House foreign affairs subcommittee on the agreement, which calls for more U.S. economic help and military assistance including trucks, jeeps and transport planes.

G. Mennen Williams, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, hurried off to Leopoldville Tuesday night to work out arrangements.

COULD FALL TO ANARCHY

In the view of high U.S. officials, the Congo could fall to anarchy or to the Communists unless fast counter-measures are taken.

With substantial U.S. backing the United Nations went into the Congo in 1960 when the then newborn country was torn by revolution. UN troops pulled out last July 1, and once again turbulence set in. Communist-backed rebels have seized large chunks of the eastern Congo.

NEW INSTALLMENT

The four U.S. Air Force C-130 planes now on their way to Leopoldville are an installment in the increased aid to keep the central government from falling apart. Officials declined to say just how big a military-economic aid program is being shaped up.

NOT FOR COMBAT

Aboard the craft which took off from Pope Air Force Base, N.C., Tuesday night were 50 paratroopers and 56 air force personnel including plane crews and maintenance men.

U.S. sources stressed that the American troops would be used only to protect U.S. property, not for combat.

There are already about 50 U.S. "military technicians" in the Congo to help maintain American equipment sent there.

2,000 Pickets

Nickel Strike Is On

THOMPSON, Man (CP)—A union spokesman said Wednesday night a strike has become official at the International Nickel Company of Canada plant here.

Members of Local 6166 of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA) voted 964 to 186 to reject latest Inco offers in a contract dispute.

Brian Koshul, union publicity chairman, said Inco will be notified immediately.

The strike, favored in a government-supervised strike vote last week, was preceded this week by wildcat walkouts while company and union negotiators thrashed out last-ditch proposals for settlement at Winnipeg.

Mr. Koshul said that when union negotiators arrived back at this one-industry town 400 miles north of Winnipeg Wednesday the plant was shut down completely.

He said about 2,000 men were picketing lines around the main gate and other accesses to Inco's $185,000,000 operation when union negotiators arrived.

Main installations at the site are the mine, mill, smelter and refinery. Inco here and at Sudbury is said to produce 75 per cent of the free world's nickel.

Cyprus Force

Greater Powers Goal

OTTAWA (CP)—Ambassadors of Canada and five other nations contributing to the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cyprus will meet today in New York to plan extension of the force's powers.

Paul Tremblay, Canada's permanent delegate to the UN, was called back to Ottawa Wednesday to be briefed.

The UN Security Council had decided the force should be used to help enforce the ceasefire shakily arranged among the Greek, Turkish and Cypriot governments.

There are, however, two important stumbling blocks, reiterated in the Commons by External Affairs Minister Martin in reply to opposition questions:

● Objections by any of the permanent members of the Security Council which can exercise a veto.

● The need for concurrence by the government of Cyprus.

New Unity Behind Barry

'Anti-Extremism' Earns Support

First Ladies Get Together

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, left, and Mrs. Lester Pearson will visit Campobello Island in New Brunswick Aug. 20 to participate in the opening of the Roosevelt Campobello International Park. Johnson and Pearson signed an agreement to establish the former summer home of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt last January.

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Cheered by enthusiastic backing of former President Eisenhower, Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wrapped up a new measure of Republican harmony Wednesday after saying he will "seek the support of no extremists—of the left or of the right."

Goldwater told press conference that he looked forward to "greatly increased unity" in the campaign as a result of having outlined his views on extremism, civil rights, foreign policy, and other issues to 36 party leaders at a three-hour summit meeting.

Sitting with Goldwater: William E. Miller, the vice-presidential nominee; former vice-president Richard Nixon, and Governor William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania. Eisenhower said the "uncertainties" he had felt about the nominee had been resolved.

"I fully support the Republican ticket in the coming campaign," the former president said.

In a wide-ranging speech aimed at answering criticism of him by both Republicans and Democrats, Goldwater said he will "seek the support of no extremists—of the left or of the right" in his presidential campaign. The speech was to a closed session but was made available to reporters.

"We repudiate character assassinations, vigilantes, Communists and any other group such as the Ku Klux Klan that seeks to impose its views through terror or threat of violence," said Goldwater in the speech.

In his press conference Goldwater refused to repudiate the right-wing John Birch Society because, he said, it was not on any subversive list.

However, Goldwater condemned Robert Welch, head of the society, saying he had been among the first to read a book by Welch and has returned it to him with the assertion that it should be burned because Welch could not prove statements in it.

"I told him that he had made damaging, ridiculous and very stupid statements," Goldwater said.

Goldwater pledged that if he is elected he will "use the great moral influence of the presidency to promote prompt and peaceful observance of the civil rights laws."

Victoria party substitutes for pie in sky.

Pie 'Undesirable' Such Crust—Cabot

Pie in the sky doesn't last, movie and television star Sebastian Cabot found out Tuesday night.

The partly part-time resident of Deep Cove said he lugged a six-pound beef, veal and egg pie 4,000 miles from London only to have it snatched away by an official of the federal agriculture department in Winnipeg.

Mr. Cabot went through customs when his Vancouver-bound plane touched down at Winnipeg on a flight from England.

He brought the pie back for his wife who, like himself, is English.

"It wasn't the customs who took it away from me," he said. "They said I could keep it if it was all right with the agriculture department but their man had the crust to say no."

In Winnipeg a spokesman for the health of animals branch of the federal department said the official only followed "the law of the land."

The spokesman said the pie "was immediately taken and destroyed in the airport's incinerator. This is routine in cases of this type."

But Mr. Cabot had the last word. He was given a Victoria meat pie, which he seemed to enjoy.

As he munched it he said, "I'll bet they ate it themselves, magnificent pie that it was."

Expenses Voted Without Debate

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of the Commons agreed late Wednesday to have the public treasury pay their car expenses for trips home to their constituencies once a week.

The House adopted without debate a report of its commissioners of internal economy — a committee of cabinet ministers working with the Speaker of the House — authorizing the change in expense allowance payments.

Bonn Feels Death Report a Ruse

Is Paraguay Shielding Bormann?

By ANTONY TERRY

BONN—Reports that Martin Bormann, Hitler's former deputy, has died in Paraguay and is buried at Ita, 30 miles from the capital, Asuncion, are being investigated through diplomatic channels in Paraguay by the Bonn government.

The German ambassador there has been asked to have the grave opened if necessary.

Bormann, who disappeared mysteriously during the last moments of the battle for Berlin in 1945, was legally presumed dead nine years later.

Recently West German's senior state prosecutor, Dr. Franz Bauer, received information that Bormann was subsequently seen alive in South America.

Investigations by the Bonn government's diplomatic representatives into the Bormann mystery are being hampered by the refusal of the Paraguayan president, Alfredo Stroessner, who is German-born, to co-operate in the search.

Bonn newspapers reported last week that the West German ambassador was "brusquely treated" when he attempted to make inquiries about Bormann and another senior Nazi, the ex-Auschwitz Dr. Joseph Mengele, who is also hiding in Paraguay.

Bauer said that the authorities suspect the report of Bormann's death has been deliberately spread by Nazi circles in South America to stop the search.

Bauer said a Czech doctor living in Paraguay recently reported treating a man for cancer who was believed to be Bormann.

West German authorities want Bormann on a separate charge from those for which he was sentenced to death in absence at Nuremberg in 1946.

Bauer has issued an arrest warrant for Bormann in connection with a last-ditch "scorched earth" order which he signed on Hitler's instructions in April, 1945, just before he vanished.

This ordered German troops

to move millions of German civilians into the centre of Germany before the Allies reached them and then destroy them with flame-throwers and bombs in a vast holocaust.

The order was based on Hitler's final statement that the Russians by beating the Germans, had proved themselves "the master race," and the Germans, therefore, had no longer any right to live.

The order exists and is part of the evidence against Bormann here.

Heart Attack Kills James Bond Writer

CANTERBURY, England (CP) — Ian Fleming, the novelist who fan his way to a mint of royalties by sending operative 007 through a labyrinth of intrigue, died Wednesday of a heart attack. He was 56.

Stricken Tuesday night, the author, ex-journalist and Second World War intelligence agent, succumbed in the Kent and Canterbury Hospital.

With him went his creation, secret agent James Bond—007 in British intelligence. That number ranked Bond fictionally as a man with the right to kill an enemy.

Fleming's James Bond novels, Dr. No, To Russia with Love, and Goldfinger have been made into movies. Sales of 007's adventures are in the millions throughout the world.

Peter Janson-Smith, his agent, estimated Fleming made more than $2,800,000 from his books and films about James Bond since 1953.

Sheriff's Officer Faces Charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hope sheriff's officer Ronald Robinson was charged Wednesday with passing a forged cheque for $304. Robinson, 58, was remanded until Aug. 19 on his own recognizance.

Perfect Plan Frees 'Great Train Thief'

LONDON (CP) — One year and four days later, the great train robbery gang struck again. This time the gang broke into Birmingham's Victoria station and escaped with Charles Wilson—one of seven men sentenced to 30 years in jail for their part in last year's £2,631,748 mail train theft.

Detectors now believe Wilson, a 32-year-old former London bookmaker, was one of the key men in the robbery and probably knows where the £2,300,000 still missing has been hidden.

Fleming's own life is reflected in the character of 007.

The author was a British intelligence officer with the rank of naval commander. So is Bond. He attended Eton College and Sandhurst. Bond is educated similarly.

Turks Vow To Aid UN

Nicosia (CP)—Turkey late Wednesday suspended its reconnaissance flights "for the time being" and pledged to help the United Nations restore peace and order.

These developments came after Turkish scout planes again set off air raid alerts across much of the island.

'Holy War' Called Off

Lumpa Leader Surrenders

LUSAKA, Northern Rhodesia (UPI)—Alice the Prophetess, mystical leader of the Lumpa sect who had been hunted by government troops with orders to bring her in dead or alive, surrendered Wednesday and called off the "holy war" that has cost nearly 500 lives.

Prime Minister Kenneth Kaunda said she gave up with some of the fanatical natives who helped her wage a campaign of terror, death and pillage in the remote northern and eastern province of this British protectorate.

IN JAIL

The 45-year-old, self-styled high priestess of the weird Lumpa sect was held in jail. Kaunda said Alice had agreed to co-operate with the government and bring an end to the Lumpa carnage. An estimated 100,000 natives swear allegiance to Alice in the hinterlands.

Guerrillas Mass For Battle

XA BA HAO, South Viet Nam (AP)—One thousand Vietnamese soldiers, ferried from Saigon in an armada of 96 helicopters, Wednesday battled an estimated 2,000 to 3,000 Viet Cong guerrillas massed in a jungle area near here.

Every available helicopter in lower South Viet Nam was called on for one of the largest helicopter assaults of the war. A battle of several days was expected, shot through the heart as he piloted his helicopter on a strafing pass over Communist positions.

'I'll Simply Close Shop'

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal marshals served a court order on segregationist Les Maddox Wednesday directing him to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt for refusing to admit Negroes to his restaurant.

The order directed Maddox to appear in federal court Aug. 20. U.S. marshals handed Maddox a copy of the order and he accepted it without commenting to the marshals, but told reporters:

"I'm not worried or concerned about this. I think it's a mistake on the part of the justice department. They have no grounds for such a suit unless they use lies or half truths."

Health Could Cost Big Tax Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians could face a 50-per-cent increase in personal income taxes if this revenue source were ever tapped to finance the big health-services package recommended last month by the Hall royal commission.

The estimate is made in its latest journal by the Canadian Tax Foundation, a large private organization of accountants, lawyers, corporations and others who aim at research into current problems of taxation and government finance.

The Hall commission advocated a comprehensive program, including prepaid medical care, that would by 1971 cost $4,481,000,000, about $466,000,000 more than existing private and public health programs would then cost.

It said about 85 per cent of the overall cost would be channelled through government, which should raise the extra funds required by increasing taxes in a way that the taxpayer could "see" how much the whole program was costing him.

A Long War

PRESIDENT JOHNSON's determination to step up American "involvement" in Viet Nam was forcefully demonstrated to the world last week when he ordered aircraft of the U.S. Seventh Fleet to bomb Communist naval installations on the North Viet Nam coast in retaliation for a series of seemingly unprovoked attacks on two U.S. destroyers.

Less newsworthy but equally indicative of Washington's new policy of displaying its muscle to show its strength to Communist forces in Southeast Asia is the steady buildup of American troops and war material now going on in South Viet Nam.

However whether President Johnson's plan will succeed in stabilizing the situation is another question. Certainly in deciding to pursue such a program, the president takes a calculated risk both at home and abroad. In the United States opposition to America's continued commitment in the Viet Nam war is daily growing both in the Senate and in the Congress.

To many Americans the deaths of nearly 300 U.S. soldiers in the Viet Nam struggle over the past three years are already too high a price to pay for entanglement in a foreign military campaign which at best can only result in a stalemate situation.

Viet Nam has ever been a sorry page in history for the West. Once part of the old Indo-China, Viet Nam was divided in two in 1954 when Communist forces from the north defeated the French at Dien Bien Phu.

After the French withdrawal from their former colony, Viet Nam was partitioned—the north going to Ho Chi Minh, a friend of Red China, and the south to Ngo Dinh Diem. Diem's new state of South Viet Nam, however, was riddled with pockets of Red guerrillas, many of whom stayed on after the war with France.

In 1957 these rebels, known as the Viet Cong, rose against Diem's government, forcing the Americans—who had backed South Viet Nam from the beginning—to increase their aid and military support.

In spite of this, rebel power continued to grow. Reinforced by groups infiltrated from the north the Viet Cong spread terror and destruction throughout the land. In nearly seven years of such wide-ranging warfare, 100,000 men have died on both sides.

Last year Diem himself was ousted and killed, and a few months later his successor General Duong Van Minh was deposed from office.

The present leader, General Nguyen Khanh, now faces the dual job of rebuilding the South Viet Nam government and waging war against the Viet Cong. In South Viet Nam the Viet Cong strength is calculated at 31,000 regulars and some 80,000 part-time guerrillas. Of the country's 43 provinces the guerrillas have significant control in 22—in which they fly their flag and collect taxes—and operate widely in all others.

Even with active American military participation a quick and decisive victory over these forces cannot be expected. For the United States the Viet Nam war will be a long and costly affair.

The Closing Stretch

THE Queen and Prince Philip will visit Ottawa in October, and, it has been suggested, open a new fall session of Parliament. That is, assuming the present session ever ends.

The Royal presence in Ottawa is an addition to the Queen's previously announced visits to Charlotte-town and Quebec City in connection with the Fathers of Confederation ceremonies to be held in these two centres. Presumably Mr. Pearson arranged the diversion to Ottawa when he was in London for the recent Commonwealth conference.

It has been hinted in Ottawa that this may be one more play in the flag issue, involving the Queen through having her host the prime minister's new maple leaf flag over Parliament Hill and thus by inference blessing it with the sovereign's sanction. Royal assent to the adoption of a Canadian flag is purely a matter of form after Parliament has put a bill on the statute books, but the Queen's active participation doubtless would be added as adding to the status of the maple leaf emblem.

If there is anything to this idea it may be one more reason why Mr. Pearson is adamant about pressing the flag debate to a finish before he allows MPs to go home for a belated recess.

Meanwhile the flag debate is scheduled to be mounted afresh this week in uninterrupted marathon sittings of the Commons. Forty-seven speeches have already been made on the subject and as many more again are expected. The debate will include an amendment calling for a national referendum and another seeking a change from three maple leaves to one, plus the polemics which inevitably will range far and wide.

It is the closing stretch of the flag issue, without a time limit but still with the insistence of Mr. Pearson that his new flag be passed—or else. How and when it will end is not yet certain; it could even be that the Queen won't personally be enlisted in seeming support of the Pearson design.

Millionaires

MR. Bennett has been able to decline gracefully Mr. Gibson's challenge to match millions personally in order to start the new B.C. bank—and for the very best of reasons. He doesn't have that kind of money.

The premier has been a successful businessman as well as a successful politician, but no one has ever thought of him as a millionaire.

In monetary terms, that is. There are other kinds of millionaires, those counted in terms of popular support. And in this realm Mr. Bennett says he is among the millionaires.

It is somewhat sad to question his standing but facts are awkward things unfortunately not to be denied. British Columbia in toto doesn't even have a plurality of voters, and thus supporters, running into millions.

Indeed at the last election only about three-quarters of one million persons cast a vote at the polls and the premier's own Sacred stalwarts totalled less than one-third of a million. His millionaire ranking in this respect is yet rather far off.

There are consolations in life, however. One need not be either a monetary or a political millionaire to enjoy the fruits of prestige and power. And Mr. Bennett leads the political parade. In voting supporters his opponents are much farther away from the millionaire class.

Thinking Aloud

By TOM TAYLOR

IT WOULD be the recent promulgation of new Queen's Counsel, perhaps, that caused a reader to telephone me about another royal specialist, to wit: that semi-mythical being known as a Queen's (or King's) Counsel.

There is a concatenation about such things. There is no connection between a counsel and a soldier, unless it is in civil court the former comes to the rescue of the latter, but when a subject, even if by titular link alone, is aired in print it may stir an echo.

And this one gives a new twist to a quest this column has long pursued—it coopts the navy. The navy doesn't have corporals, so hitherto I have excluded the senior service from my researches, although my files contain references to Royal Marine corporals of the aforesaid so-called ilk, and indeed to an RN petty officer who was the equivalent. His was an "Admiralty Promotion" which no matter his future misadventure could not be taken away from him.

Or so it is alleged.

If I seem sceptical this is only because the more I have pursued this matter the more I have run into, as it were, a brick wall. The Queen's or King's Counsel is as elusive as was the Scarlet Pimpernel. Officially, that is, I have a shelf of letters from veterans who swear by some gods that they knew of this or that person of older days who was, indubitably, such a being. And I would not assail their memories.

On the other hand I have the word of an Ottawa army historian that the King's Counsel appears to be but a persistent army myth, and among my records is the affirmation of a Whitehall cabinet minister, a secretary for war, that there is no factual basis for any such rank in living memory.

As Churchill said of Russia this strip of much contradiction is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma.

To boot, also, there is a famous regiment, the oldest in the British army, whose regimental journal has publicized one of its illustrious rankers as a King's Counsel, a DCM winner for, but whose CO has confessed he couldn't authenticate the distinction.

Yet, no smoke being without fire, as they say, the substance to this semi-mythical warrior, must be somewhere. Royal favors are not likely to be worn on the sleeve, and receive recognition from his fellows, without a degree of validity.

It is interesting however to have the navy, whether RN or RCN, brought into the picture. As we have noted he couldn't very well be ranked as a corporal, but he could be a King's Leading Seaman, so enabled for all time for bravery or meritorious action.

Such at any rate is in the mind of my reader and he promises to regale me with further information on this intriguing subject. I shall let you know what transpires.

Another mystery, of smaller lustre, has titillated me for a long time.

In one of the messrooms at the Bay Street Armoury is a painting of a cavalry charge at Ypres, north of the Gaza Strip, which in the long ago I watched with admiring eyes. And since there were no Canadian forces in that campaign I've been puzzled to know how such a painting comes to be in the Armoury.

But I have never found out. No one hereabouts seems to know.

Without a Lifted Eyebrow

SEEMS like only yesterday that Howard Green, for 27 good and faithful years a Vancouver Conservative MP, discovered that the external affairs department had paid $2,000 each for a pair of hall mirrors in the governments of that day.

And all heck broke loose in the Commons, the spendthrift enormity of it even impressing the government of that day.

Standards must be changing, or maybe it's just the rising cost of living—the administration as well as everybody else's—for the government of THIS day has just finished spending $55,000 for six chandeliers in the West Block of Parliament Hill.

And nobody has so much as raised an eyebrow, let alone his voice.

It was back maybe 11 or 12 years ago that Howard Green, by dint of prying, prodding and poking, dragged from reluctant external affairs department executives that $4,800 story of the two mirrors, and the House of Commons Oh'd and Ah'd and Gee Whizzed about it for days.

Then, everybody was embarrassed.

This time, though, there was nothing secret about the six chandeliers and the $55,000.

Nobody had to prod, poke or pry for the information from a red-faced officialdom.

Just ask the questions and you get the answers.

They all say that sure, it sounds like quite a price to pay—but what the heck?

Each a great cluster of glittering cutglass, 10 feet deep and six feet across, the chandeliers, salvaged from the wrecking of an old town hall in Liverpool, came at $9,000 the copy. Packing, freight, insurance, customs duty, sales tax and installation bumped the bill to the $55,000.

They swing now from the ceiling of the new and spectacular VIP reception, dining (and dance) hall where the government and Parliament entertain the visiting great and near-great.

It's quite a sight to see $55,000 light up every time somebody presses the wall switch button.

This $55,000 beacon is almost like an advertising sign, flashing word of the great physical changes that have come to Parliament Hill with the $8,000,000 rebuilding of the 100-year-old West Block.

It used to be that MPs were doubled up, two to a small room in the Centre Block, each with a desk jammed in opposite corners of the linoleum-covered office, often sharing the services of the one over-worked stenographer.

Now every man has his own office—giant-sized if located in the West Block—and works in well-to-do carpeted comfort, often with the place tastefully draped, and has his own secretary.

A few of the more artistic types have even had interior decorators in to give the office the professionally chic touch.

And to think it wasn't much more than 20 years ago that former Prime Minister Mackenzie King, with the costs of war mounting, appointed a special "controller of economy," as he called him, when it was discovered that some civil servants and even a few MPs had somehow wrangled rugs for their offices.

The rugs had been required from the federal works department, and Mr. King's sense of the economic fitness of things was outraged when he learned that a couple of these carpets were even monogrammed. (One, or perhaps two, of the big brass at National Defence Headquarters, had had the initials of their services woven into the pattern of their carpets.)

The prime minister's emergency-appointed economy controller set up shop in a small back office. For a desk, he threw planks over two sawhorses and covered them with blank newspaper, thumbtacked down. And he hired one stenographer to bat out his bulletins, to junior civil servants and cabinet ministers alike, on how to save money.

Everybody got rid of their rugs, and cabinet ministers even dispensed with their expensive embossed official letterheads. There were savings all over the place.

Mr. King and his economy controller, a crusty old character, Colonel John Thompson, would probably keel over in horror, shocked to the very roots of their thrifty beings, if they could see that $55,000 light up today like some Broadway white neon spectacle.

Washington Calling

Using the Tactics of Mao

By MARQUIN CHILDS

A BOOK attracting more attention than even its author may have hoped for is "How to Win an Election" by Stephen C. Shadegg. It contains ammunition, both pro and con, for the argument over whether the new Goldwater Republican party has broken from American tradition and is in the pattern of Europe's ideological parties.

Shadegg was Sen. Barry Goldwater's manager in his two campaigns for the Senate in Arizona. Later, when Goldwater took over the Republican senatorial campaign committee, he became a consultant. The chapter in the Shadegg book on which attention has centered is "The Cell Group." He pays generous tribute to one source of inspiration as follows:

"Mao Tse-tung, the Communist revolutionary general, has written a valuable book on the tactics of infiltration. In it he says: 'Give me just two or three men in a village and I will take the village.' In the Goldwater campaign of 1962 and 1968 and in all other campaigns where I have served as a consultant, I have followed the advice of Mao Tse-tung."

This may come as news to Mao, who is currently engaged in a fierce quarrel with Premier Khrushchev for control of the world Communist movement. Certainly it will be news to many Republicans who may not have been aware that one of their highly paid consultants was applying the tactics of China's revolutionary leader. Shadegg refers to the individuals enrolled in the cell groups as a "secret weapon possessing strength, mobility and real impact." In Goldwater's 1958 campaign there were 3,200 cell-group members in Arizona.

In a campaign he directed in Nebraska in 1960, Shadegg says, he enrolled 100,000 cell members. They were processed through IBM machines to show banking connections, church affiliations and family relationships throughout the state. One goal was to insure that each cell member "will actually come to consider the threat of defeat as menacing him personally."

In Arizona cell members were working for most radio and television outlets. They supplied important advance information on the plans of the opposition so that those plans could be countered. The "security" of opposition campaign headquarters "can be penetrated," Shadegg says, with very useful results.

Not all of the book is on such a practical level. The last chapter, "For Men of Good Conscience," sounds a note of sacrifice that the seeker after high office must pay. It is curious, as though this might be prophetic for Goldwater, with Lincoln's moving farewell remarks to the citizens of Springfield, Ill., as he set out for Washington following his election to the presidency.

When Shadegg was consultant to the Republican senatorial campaign committee it was reported one of his most important chores was as ghost writer for Goldwater's book, "The Confidence of a Conqueror." This Shadegg denied. He was also said to have helped the Arizona senator with the newspaper column he wrote for several years.

No one can challenge Shadegg's skill and versatility as a writer. He wrote scripts for B pictures in Hollywood at one point in his career. Some of the more hard-boiled Goldwaterites refer to him scornfully as a romantic. But his romanticism, if that it what it is, seems to have been in tune with that of his chief.

A report on Senate campaign expenditures in 1961 showed that $4,000 a month had been paid to the S and K Laboratories in Phoenix, Ariz. Inquiry revealed that the company owned this company which put out an asthma remedy called Adreno-Mist. At the time, Shadegg told reporter Jack Anderson that the total of $40,000 paid through S and K Laboratories was for his services in the campaign, including travel and other expenses.

In the long and skillfully directed drive that led up to Goldwater's triumph at San Francisco, Shadegg was campaign organizer for the western states. He sat out at least part of the futile primary campaign in Oregon and at one point confessed his bafflement in trying to combat the absent candidate, Henry Cabot Lodge. His advice may have led Goldwater to give up Oregon for California, where he cinched the nomination. In Oregon, Goldwater came in third after Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Lodge.

What part Shadegg will play in the coming presidential campaign is not yet settled. He is currently in Phoenix. If what he sets forth in "How to Win an Election" is any measure, he has surely proved his worth. There could, however, be some doubt as to how the cell-group system will work on a national scale.

Resettling Well

The Algerian Exiles

By ANDREW MULLIGAN from Paris

THREE recent events have reminded Frenchmen that they have absorbed nearly a million "pieds noirs" since 1962. That they needed reminding is indicative of the comparative painlessness of a problem normally fraught with difficulty and unhappiness for both the indigenous population and the expatriates.

First, President de Gaulle congratulated the Algerian expatriates on the way they had adapted to metropolitan French life. Then the minister for expatriates launched a scheme to house the aged pieds noirs in the towns and villages of the south and southeast. Then the Canadian government agreed to subsidize expatriate Algerian farmers and to give them technical assistance if they choose to immigrate to Canada. The French government has agreed to pay their fares and to assist them in other ways.

That such measures are necessary shows that the problem still exists, but in the immediate necessities of housing and jobs the government, with the help of specialized agencies, and the national employment agency at Marseilles, has coped admirably with the resettling of the Algerian exiles.

Since April, 1963, three basic steps have been taken. First, a campaign informed the pieds noirs of how and where to look for work. The government then negotiated with the unions so that the expatriates would be regarded simply as "unemployed" and not as immigrant workers. Finally, a national organization was set up to offer employment specially for expatriates.

The pieds noirs can be divided into three categories: those in their twenties, those in their thirties, and those between the ages of 40 and 45. Not surprisingly the third category has posed the biggest problem. Besides economic reorientation, there is the complex problem of social "declassification" which is often the most painful and frequently in the third category, and a problem further complicated for those who have no technical qualifications and no specialist training.

The real difficulties were among those who had no professional associations to back them up. An estimated 6,000 benefited directly from groups designed to help chemists, hairdressers, veterinarians, etc., to continue to practise in France. Since the exodus from Algeria, the ministry was disbanded just recently has given $300,000 to various organizations such as chambers of commerce, law societies, etc., and pieds noir in the third-age category can now take up their professions in France without preliminary apprenticeship.

But the difficulties of the commercial and industrial expatriates are as nothing compared to the agricultural ones. They have found it difficult to find suitable work, and most of them are now employed in the food processing industry. Twenty-one thousand artisans and small businessmen in the second-age category have now switched to salaried jobs, chiefly in the metal and plastics industries.

Fourteen per cent of the expatriates are over 60. Most of them have little money. Moreover, in Algeria, family life was much closer and the aged often lived with their families. The French government realizes that it must provide a minimum income now that they have settled in France. As for the "Harkis" who fought with the French Army during the Algerian war, there are some 40,000 who have chosen exile in France and French nationality. Many have been absorbed in forestry and 2,000-old are still awaiting work in the original transit camp at Rivesaltes.

Those who can't work or are sick or were wounded in the setting of the post-war feuds in Algeria, will remain at the camp of St. Maurice l'Ardouise which will be converted into a medico-social centre. Some 5,000 Harkis are now farming, and a further 15,000 are working in the industrial northeast.

When the pied noirs poured off the ships in 1962, many Frenchmen were disturbed. France's population explosion had already strained the housing situation. There were three major reasons for the slow progress made on housing: The return of twice as many pied noirs within a few months as had been envisaged in four years; the penalty of the expatriates, and their concentration in regions already saturated by Tunisian and Moroccan expatriates.

A program was launched to build 58,000 apartments to let at moderate prices and the repair of dilapidated houses and farms and even agricultural and industrial buildings. The first pied noirs to arrive often repaired the buildings which they let in turn to later arrivals and for which they were only allowed to charge controlled rents.

On the Mediterranean seaboard the pied noirs have infused new life into the sleepy economy. In Montpellier I sat in the salon of a pied noir barber. He was happily resettled and told me of many compatriots who had started flourishing supermarkets and hotels in the area. The locals were suspicious at first, he said, "but they now accept us as part of the community and I think this area (the Languedoc) has a great future."

Not every pied noir is so happy and not every expatriate has had the benefit of a professional training. What is striking, however, is the way the government has broken the back of the problem and the realism which the exiles have shown.

Scandal Ammunition For Socialists

By Colonist Correspondent EDWIN ROTH, from London

Senator Barry Goldwater has begun his ghostly British career as official horror bogey of the British Conservative party's election campaign.

It started when Britain's Aviation Minister Julian Amery said in the House of Commons: "No doubt if the party opposite came into office, Polaris would be abandoned, and the nation would have to rely on whatever United States President comes into power."

The innuendo was very clear.

These words were in the speech with which Amery defended himself and the Conservative administration against a Labour party censure motion caused by a tremendous financial scandal about defence costs.

Julian Amery's ministry had bought from the huge British company, Ferranti Limited, the rocket missile "Bloodhound" at a price agreed between the company and the ministry.

A "fair and reasonable" profit on defence contracts is officially considered to be 7 per cent, although some firms sometimes make more.

On the "Bloodhound," Ferranti Limited made at the British taxpayer's expense a profit of £2 per cent—in money more than the sterling equivalent of $22,000,000.

A member of the multi-millionaires family is the Conservative MP Basil de Ferranti. Some time ago he quit the government, in which he was a junior minister, so that his family firm could accept government contracts without embarrassment.

As British law now stands—and this is a law which the Labour party would change if it came to power—any contribution which the firm or the de Ferranti family may have made to the Conservative party is secret, and need not be revealed by anybody.

Report Devastating

The £2 per cent profit at the British taxpayer's expense was discovered by expert civil servants in the government's finance department.

Naturally, the Labour opposition demanded a full inquiry. The government established an inquiry committee headed by Sir John Lang, a retired civil servant.

Much to the government's anger, Sir John Lang and his assistants worked so fast that his report was ready before the final summer vacation of the expiring House of Commons.

It was a devastating report which attacked not only the Aviation Ministry for gross incompetence, but also Ferranti Limited for having by deliberate alliance misled the government experts into thinking that its profit would be only £810,000 instead of more than £5,000,000 (£50,000,000).

For the Labour party, Ferranti Limited immediately became the great election campaign symbol of grasping, dishonest private enterprise.

Labour party leader Harold Wilson moved a formal censure motion in the House of Commons, deploring the government's "failure to provide adequately for the protection of the taxpayer."

According to British tradition, a minister is completely responsible for his civil servants, so that after such a report he would have to resign.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home wanted no disgraceful resignation at election time, and as the Conservative majority in the House of Commons assured the rejection of Wilson's motion, Julian Amery's job was not in immediate danger.

But the last big debate of the expiring parliament gave Wilson a sensational and immensely useful chance for opening his election battle against the whole Conservative defence policy.

'Price of Nepotism'

"This is the price of nepotism," said Wilson. Amery blushed scarlet, because he is the son-in-law of former prime minister Harold Macmillan, who made him a minister.

With fierce irony, Wilson listed the enormous waste of British defence expenditure in the past seven years, and called the Conservative government's defence policy "the nuclear La Ronde."

This list will be very effective in the Labour party's election campaign—so effective that the Conservatives may abandon their plan to fight most of the campaign on defence.

In 1957, Britain was to be defended by Polaris, recalled Wilson. In 1959, Polaris was replaced by the "Blue Streak" missile, and Wilson said caustically: "We remember the long press briefings to show why Polaris would not work."

In 1960, the Blue Streak was abandoned in favor of the Skybolt missile. And in 1962, a new minister abandoned Skybolt and replaced it with the same Polaris which the government had rejected so contemptuously four years before.

"There has been hundreds of millions of pounds expenditure on this nuclear La Ronde," cried Wilson. "In the last five years, it was £800 million pounds."

Amery's defence against this attack was so incredibly bad, that the Conservatives were horrified.

Roars of Opposition laughter followed Amery's statement: "It does not pay to take advantage of the government." Even louder laughter was caused by his sentence: "Ferranti has agreed to make a refund, which I understand is very inconvenient to the firm."

Amidst loud Labour protests, Amery announced that the Conservative government would not discriminate against Ferranti Limited.

Wilson's attacks were answered by Amery with the accusation that Wilson had sabotaged the British sale of warships to Spain. By that, Britain lost a large sum of money—"and I do not see us getting this money back."

Revenge Ruthless

But the Laborite James Hoy, who spoke immediately after Amery, avenged Amery's mention of the warship deal with Spain, which Wilson had spilt by one of the most ruthless, wounding personal attacks in recent political history.

As Amery blushed, Hoy said: "If I wanted to be personal to the minister, I would tell him it does not lie in his mouth to use the words 'Spain' and 'sabotage.' Let him remember that because in the heat of a political battle somebody may be tempted to recall certain things."

To ensure he was understood, Hoy added: "But we prefer to remember the great honor that his father brought to this House when he was a member." He emphasized the word father.

Australia Hikes

Tax on Luxuries

CANBERRA (Reuters).—The Australian government announced that it will increase taxes on incomes, cigarettes, cars, television licences and telephones.

The tax increases were among measures Treasurer Harold Holt announced in outlining the federal budget for 1964-65. He said they were needed to help preserve the country's economic stability.

Julian Amery's father was the honored, popular Conservative parliamentarian and minister Leo Amery, who fought against Neville Chamberlain's appeasement policy and was a close friend of Winston Churchill.

But Julian Amery's brother John Amery went to Spain during the Spanish civil war to help Franco.

In the Second World War, John Amery went to Germany, where as a British Nazi he broadcast against Britain on the German radio. After the war he was tried for treason in London, and hanged as a traitor.

This was probably the first time in Julian Amery's political career that anybody had publicly hinted about his brother.

But Amery had hit Wilson below the belt by mentioning the warships for Spain deal, which was irrelevant to that debate. Hoy showed Amery that Amery cannot hit anyone below the belt.

Now Britain is awaiting an election battle which in bitterness, fury and personal nastiness will surpass anything in 20th century British politics.

Its date, still not fixed, will depend on political developments in the United States. And besides Sir Alec Douglas-Home and Harold Wilson, its most important figure will be Barry Goldwater.

Control Now, Elections Later

By GAVIN YOUNG
From Leopoldville

"Great news. This is the moment when Tshombe must listen to us," said a triumphant Congolese Lumumbist politician in Leopoldville.

"Now he must stop talking of defeating the People's Army in the provinces and accept our conditions."

It was the day last week when Stanleyville fell to Gaston Soumialot's rebels. The news hit the capital like a bomb. Only a week ago Leopoldville welcomed Congolese Prime Minister Moïse Tshombe, the would-be architect of national reconciliation, with cheers and ceremony.

The army garrison had plenty of warning of the rebels' approach. But the city fell just the same—the greatest psychological victory so far in the Lumumbists' drive to regain the power they lost in the autumn of 1960.

(MNC) are now putting their conditions for a ceasefire sky-high.

The Lumumbists have spurned gentlemanly compromises. They are refusing to forget the past and are pushing for what they have always wanted, the resignation of the Congo's shrewd, deceptively tough President Kasavubu, the dismissal of General Mobutu, the chief of staff, and the formation of a greatly expanded government dominated by members of the Lumumbist groups.

They have said that they would accept Tshombe as prime minister only if he works to achieve these three ends. Thus the Lumumbists' price is control of the government and elimination of their political enemies.

"We can have elections later," they say. "The people are with us."

The imminent future of the Congo is bleak. If rebel conditions are met—and there is no indication yet from Tshombe that they will be—the prospect looms of purges, bloodshed and a European exodus.

Hideous ghosts of the 1960 disaster have returned to haunt the Congolese capital. People are weighing the chances of another army mutiny and a failure of law and order.

But with no United Nations manny to come running this time. (London Observer Service)

Welensky Acts To Prevent Coup

By RONALD LEGGE, from Salisbury

Sir Roy Welensky, former prime minister of the Central African Federation, has announced that he is returning to active politics in Southern Rhodesia as leader of the new Rhodesia party.

His decision has been prompted to a considerable extent by the growing belief, which he is understood to share, that Ian Smith's government is planning an independence coup for October.

Right-wing members of the cabinet are now confident that a method can be adopted of making a unilateral declaration which would give at least a facade of legality to seizure of independence and also spike the guns of any opposition from neighboring countries.

In broad outline, the plan is to pass an enabling ordinance permitting parliament to make minor alterations in the constitution. A titular president would be appointed but Southern Rhodesia would not leave the Commonwealth and the sovereignty of the Queen as its head would be recognized.

It is thought that the British government would either have to accept Southern Rhodesia as a member of the "club" or agree to her expulsion.

The government is confident that white Southern Rhodesians enjoy widespread sympathy in Britain because of their long record of loyalty to the mother country.

A military and economic pact with Angola is said to be already in draft form.

This would be part of counter-measures to prevent Northern Rhodesia or Malawi harboring a government in exile or allowing invasion troops on their soil.

The new regime would obtain immediate recognition by Portugal. Angola has promised in the event of an unfriendly attitude by Northern Rhodesia to close the Benguela railway, a vital communications outlet for her copper exports.

Southern Rhodesia in turn would cut off supplies to Northern Rhodesia of coal from the Wankie colliery and shut down power from Kariba (the power house is on the southern bank of the Zambezi).

Because Smith and his colleagues are convinced they would have a hostile press, both locally and overseas, one of the new regime's first acts would be to take over control of the Southern Rhodesia Broadcasting Corporation.

It was claimed that wide powers exist under the corporation's charter which enable this to be done.

Sir Roy Welensky's first move is to contest the Arundel constituency of Salisbury in a by-election as a candidate of his new opposition party.

"History has many examples of slaughters and atrocities, but for no two things emerge about Auschwitz."

"Auschwitz was a death factory with at the same time a successful attempt to make use of the victims' belongings—rings, watches, silk and woollen underwear, gold teeth, women's hair, anything. This was new."

"The second thing is that from studying the personal files of the men who worked at Auschwitz—their religious, family and personal background—I'm convinced they represented a cross-section of the German population at the time. And not one of them rebelled." — Joachim Kasper, prosecutor at current trial in Germany of 31 officials and guards at Auschwitz.

"Our two governments have the same opinion on almost every important international problem because our politics are based on the same moral principles," said Dr. Franz Helmut Leitner.

COMBINED VISIT

Dr. Leitner arrived in Victoria Wednesday on a combined official and vacation visit with his family after a motor trip which started in Ottawa July 19.

Dr. and Mrs. Leitner drove their own car and made the complete trip on Canadian highways.

"With the exception of two stretches under construction they were excellent," the ambassador said.

"Our main purpose was to get to know the country," Dr. Leitner said. He took up his post in Ottawa in March, a post he requested and waited 11 years for.

Beaver Tag Regulation Discontinued

British Columbia's beaver seal system, introduced as a conservation measure nearly 20 years ago, has been discontinued.

A provincial order-in-council Wednesday rescinded a 1945 order which required that all beaver pelts trapped in the province be tagged with special seals.

At the same time, the government extended the 1965 beaver season two weeks. Similar extensions were ordered for muskrat and otter.

The new closing dates for trapping the three species range from March 15 to May 15.

Youths Slash 82 Tires

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Wednesday they believe a group of youths who were evicted from a party were responsible for slashing 82 tires on 25 cars in a section of West Vancouver Tuesday night. Some cars had as many as four tires flattened, but most had two.

Moby Doll Eating At Last

VANCOUVER (CP) — Moby Doll is now eating. The man who saw her eating, and squealing happily as she did it, was Aid. Aeneas Bell-Irving, president of the Vancouver Aquarium Society.

The 'killer whale' has baffled local experts by apparently keeping in fine health and spirits for four weeks since her capture, although nobody has seen her take a bite of anything proffered her.

CUT CIRCLES

Aid. Bell-Irving was standing beside her pen at the Jericho Army Base Wednesday as a radio operator was making underwater recordings of her "talk."

"Suddenly she stopped her endless anti-clockwise circles and began to swim in tight little circles," he said.

"She started swimming clockwise and making S-turns in one corner of the pen, squealing loudly all the time. That's when I saw her catch and eat a live fish—I don't know whether it was a salmon or a ling cod."

ANOTHER FIRST

The 2½-ton killer whale added another first to her list Wednesday when she became the first killer whale to make a long-distance phone call.

Recordings of her voice were put on the line to Montreal so that aquarium curator Murray Newman could let Quebec movie-makers know at what speed her talk should be produced in a film.

India Wants Red Weapons

NEW DELHI (UPI) — An Indian military mission plans to go to Moscow Aug. 20 to negotiate the purchase of defence materials, including MiG jet fighters and all-weather helicopters.

Suit Built For Two?

If suit fits, wear it, even if it takes two to fill it. This must be navy's philosophy in supplying wet-weather coveralls in size containing Pi Egnace Shushack, 1888 Wood, and CPO James Jack, 643 Mount View, instructors at HMCS Venture. Navy has still larger size in stock spokesman said, but couldn't say why.

Heliport to Be Built In Middle of City

A heliport site " smack in the middle of the city" will be developed in about two years, according to word Wednesday from City Hall.

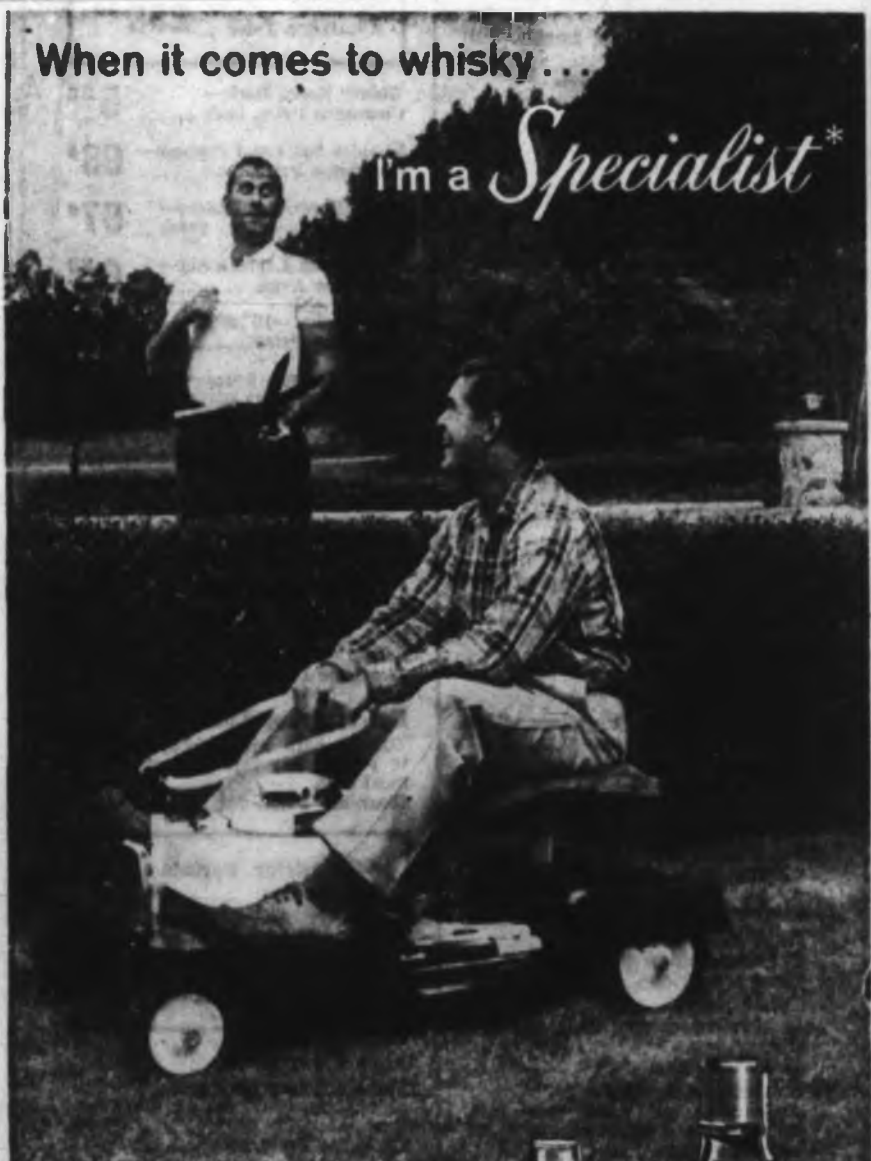

Negotiations have been completed for a lease on 10 acres of provincially-controlled land in the industrial reserve including a knoll between the Sidney Roofing plant and the CNR yards.

Assistant to the city manager, William Hooper, said Wednesday that the $35,000 initial development will be undertaken under the capital works program.

A 40 by 40 foot concrete landing pad will be part of the heliport complex, along with a waiting room and car park. Overhead wires in the area will be removed.

Court Parade

He Won Two Of Three

Impassioned, irrelevant and tiresome were terms used by Magistrate William Ostler to describe the defence oratory of city motel operator Peter Hartnell in Victoria magistrate's court Wednesday.

Appearing in court on a charge of unlawfully soliciting business on Wharf Street, Hartnell produced witnesses, diagrams and some charges of his own in support of his claim that he didn't leave the sidewalk when passing out pamphlets.

POLICEMAN'S VIGIL

He spoke of efforts over a period of two years "to get him." He said that a city police sergeant sometimes stared at him "for as long as 25 minutes when I'm passing out material to tourists in their cars as they come off the Black Ball ferry."

Mr. Hartnell felt that police were detailed to harass him.

In his summation for the defence, he spoke of his contribution to the public as a heavy taxpayer, of his service as a distributor of maps and listings of local points of interest.

CHARGE DISMISSED

The charge against him was dismissed.

The driveway on which Mr. Hartnell was alleged to have been distributing material was not shown in evidence to be a roadway to Wharf Street, ruled the magistrate.

APPEARS FOR WIFE

Prior to this case, Hartnell appeared on behalf of his wife, who had been issued a parking ticket, July 6.

Again he read a map of the area. He spoke of the confusion in the minds of the public over parking signs, particularly in the area where his wife had received the ticket.

'GHOSTLY SIGHT'

When he went on to speak of "the ghostly sight of tourist cars being yanked away," the magistrate said the court is not the place to make a speech about it.

However, the magistrate felt that the relevant evidence brought forth justified a suspended sentence.

This was the third case in two days at which Hartnell appeared. Tuesday he paid a parking fine after an unsuccessful defence.

CAR ROLLED

Neglecting to set an emergency brake cost William Martell of Vancouver $20.

His unattended car rolled into Individual Dry Cleaners, 1536 Fort at 9 a.m. Tuesday, causing $100 damage to the building, but none to his car.

Society Protects Horses

Killers of B.C.'s wild horses are criticized in a pamphlet issued today by the Committee for the Preservation of Wild Horses in Canada.

Equally guilty, however, says the committee, is the B.C. government for allowing up to $7.50 bounties for the capture for slaughter of wild horses.

Now the committee is asking everyone to urge their MLA to do something to bring about legislation to protect the horses.

Just a few herds of wild or semi-wild horses still roam the wildernesses in the interior, but the committee fears they will become extinct if their capture and slaughter continues.

"CREATE REFUGE"

Only way to save them, says the committee, is to create a refuge in one of the many suitable areas in the interior where the wild horses could be given permanent sanctuary.

Hundreds of semi-wild horses are rounded up each year, says the pamphlet, and shipped to U.S. slaughter houses where they are killed for meat.

New laws should be introduced by the government, the committee urges, to protect the horses from exploitation.

PREVENT NEGLECT

Starvation and neglect while in transit could be prevented if the horses were killed in B.C. and only the flesh transported.

Offering bounties should be discontinued, says the committee, and horses rounded up each fall from the open range should be offered for sale to the general public.

No horses would be destroyed, unless under supervision of SPCA inspectors.

Rocks Make Sure of Tie As Hansen Proves Point

By ROBIN JEFFREY

It took three frustrating years, but youthful John Hansen proved to Victoria Shamrocks and 2,813 fans last night that he really belongs.

And Hansen couldn't have picked a better time to do it as his three goals drove Shamrocks to a 7-5 victory over New Westminster and the prospect of nothing worse than a tie for second place in the Inter-City Lacrosse League.

The win left Rocks in second place with 37 points, and put the pressure on New Westminster for tonight's return game in the Royal City. New Westminster must take tonight's contest to salvage a tie for second spot.

If it does win tonight, a sudden-death game will be played Saturday, in the hometown of the team with the better goal average, to decide second place. Second-place team has the advantage of the possible extra-playoff game in the best-of-five semi-final.

But if the evening was good for the Shamrocks, it provided an unequalled morale boost for Hansen. The late junior addition, who is still under 21, played 39 games for the Rocks in the 1961 and 1962 seasons.

MISSED SEASON

He didn't match his junior form, however, and the feeling was that he had been brought up too young. He sat out the 1963 campaign and made a comeback this year with the junior Shamrocks.

Two weeks ago Hansen came back to the senior club when it was hit by injuries and holidays. He filled in for Ron Jay on the power-play in Vancouver July 28 and didn't score a goal in 10 shots. After that performance, many lacrosse people thought he wouldn't help the Shamrocks—and said so.

HAD THE ANSWER

But last night he played Jay's spot on the power-play and figured in three of the Rocks' four odd-man goals. He passed to Billy Gray for one and scored two himself, as well as setting up Jim McNeill for a neat opener after only a minute and 18 seconds.

Hansen got his other goal just after Dave Torg returned to the floor after serving a penalty.

AWAY FAST

Only some fine goalkeeping by New Westminster's Joe Comeau kept Shamrocks from taking a three- or four-goal lead in the first quarter. As it was, Shamrocks left the floor with a 2-1 edge after Comeau had made five brilliant stops during a four-minute period when New Westminster was short-handed.

Getting most of the draws and outshooting their opponents, 42-25, Shamrocks looked in trouble only twice.

In the third quarter, Paul Parnell and Bill Wilkes scored within a minute to bring the score to 5-3 but a penalty to Torg ended that threat. Losers got to 6-5 once in the fourth quarter, but Shamrocks, led by tenacious Barry Ashbee, controlled the ball and Hansen clinched it with his third goal at 11:52.

GP W L T P A Pts

New Westminster 31 19 13 3 207 236 37
Sasamee 21 8 4 7 9 287 25 25

Last night's score: New Westminster 5, Victoria 7.

Next game: tonight—Victoria at New Westminster.

Seven Others Went In

Victoria Shamrocks' Barry Ashbee, almost surrounded by New Westminster defenders, breaks through for shot on goalie Joe Comeau during last night's Inter-City Lacrosse League game at Memorial Arena, won by Shamrocks 7-5. Ashbee failed to score but was a defensive standout. — (Robin Clarke)

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI)

Just about every top name in the world of golf is entered in the $200,000 Carling World Open at Oakland Hills Country Club, to be held August 27 to 30.

The 155-man field includes the top shot makers from American Arnold Palmer to young Yoshio Hiseh of China.

It will be the largest single assemblage of international golf champions in history. The field of stars will come from 14 different countries, including an eight-man Canadian team.

Canadian Open winner Kel Nagle of Australia will be competing in the tournament fresh from his victory in Montreal earlier this month. So will National Open champion Ken Venturi, PGA winner Bobby Nichols and British Open king Tony Lema as well as Palmer.

Among the other top performers who will play are Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player, Chi Chi Rodriguez and two former British Open champions, southpaw Bob Charles of New Zealand and ferret nations, including an eight-man Canadian team.

The winner receives $35,000.

Way back in the days of my boyhood misty-eyed mothers prayed nightly that their sons would achieve a place in the Professions.

They would have died happily to know that their offspring would some day become a doctor of dignity, a barrister of rapier wit or even a curate with threadbare pants. Poets weren't highly thought of, scientists were regarded with the utmost suspicion, actors were all out-and-out rascals, and, bottom of all, were professional sportsmen. Professional golfers—known, of course, only by surname—were so far on the wrong side of the railway tracks as to be almost untraceable.

Well, how times change! Not a week goes by without my mail containing at least one letter from a dad or mum simply desperate for their boy to break through in the now-glamorous world of tournament golf.

Now Quite a Career

You don't need a degree in philosophy, of course, to understand this change of climate. Dad and mum the world over are reading daily of the fantastic wealth that has suddenly attached itself to the game. Not only wealthy for professional boxing has that too—but an international respectability.

One day it's a photograph of millionaire Arnold Palmer chatting casually with the President of the United States. Next day it's a dollar millionaire Gary Player beaming his way aboard yet another airliner with mink-coated wife, two children and a couple of nannies in tow.

It is wonderful to be in a business whose image has changed so much for the better. A Briton, Henry Cotton, was more responsible for it than any man living. But Henry himself would be the first man to warn all those dads and mums "Beware."

Yes, it is a wonderful, glamorous, adventurous, influential, wealthy, healthy and long-lasting profession. But only if you are a great and not merely a good golfer.

And great golfers, believe me, are not made. They are born and nothing that the world's greatest golf teachers can do will ever make it otherwise.

I have launched on this theme because of an extraordinary experiment at present going on in Britain. A wealthy management efficiency expert named Ernest Butten, dismayed at Britain's slipping status in the international golf rankings, has taken four young professionals under contract with the simple idea of making them Palmers and Players. He seems prepared to spend limitless money on them, works them hard on a ruthless rota of body-building, dieting and mental preparation as well as golf tuition and, only this month, offered a £2,000-a-year salary to a qualified manager and trainer to supervise their program.

Not Convinced

Admirable. I've always maintained that British professionals will get nowhere until they are prepared to give their lives to golf. . . . but I'm not convinced this is the way to do it.

Palmer did it with the help of his father, Player did it with simply a determined drive of fantastic proportions. But believe me, there are very few sons across the world who will ever achieve those heights. So, let me first of all warn all those ambitious parents that unless their precious child is blessed with almost super-natural characteristics of drive and ruthless determination—even before we consider his latent golfing ability—he might just as well settle for something else.

Not more than one in five million will emerge happily. I make no apologies if these remarks are even interpreted as rudeness. They are written with the sole object of saving some youngsters the terrible heartbreak of failure.

But having made that point let me add this. Never, in my years in golf, have I known such a crop of really encouraging talent as we are now producing among the youngsters in Britain.

Let me give you an example. At the Dulwich golf club, on the outskirts of London, there is a 14-year-old junior member named Nicholas Chalk who looked to me like the biffin of the lower fourth. When he pulls himself up to his full towering height he stands 5 ft. 5 in. He wears spectacles and, you'd swear, would be blown over by a light nor'easter.

Well, Nicky Chalk went round the 5,831 yards of his tough home course last week in 69 shots and to prove it wasn't a fluke did it in 71 the next day.

Another young member, Peter Osterhuis, also went round twice for a total of 140. He's 16, it is true, but he has already been twice junior champion of his country.

Issues Challenge

The Dulwich professional, Len Rowe, devotes hours of his time to bringing on the sons of members. But of these two lads he is rightly extraordinarily proud. Indeed, he challenges any other club anywhere to find two boys, whose combined ages must not exceed 30, to take them on.

This is a pretty general picture of the game's development among a new generation. There is not room for more than a couple at the very top, perhaps, but among them somewhere is another Gary Player who will tell me to button my lip, get out of his path and to hell with all my warnings of heartbreaks and disappointments.

Now THAT lad—if he could shoot par scores at 14 or 15—is in the one who will really make it. It isn't just tough at the top in golf. It's murder.

Baseball Leaders Make Sure of Tie

Transport Workers 10 11 633
Independents 17 12 271 12
Greaves 15 18 454 45
McLaren 9 21 300 30

Next game: tonight—Transport Workers vs. Independents 7 p.m., Royal Athletic Park.

Independents will have to settle for a first-place tie at best in the senior amateur baseball league.

Transport Workers made certain of nothing worse than a playoff for the championship at Royal Athletic Park last night when they bested Greaves, 1-0, by scoring the only run in the last inning without a base hit.

BIG ONE TONIGHT

It gives the leaders a chance to clinch tonight in the most important game of the season. If Transport win tonight, they have it clinched. If they lose, Independents will have to defeat McLaren in the last scheduled game of the season Saturday afternoon.

In that event, a sudden-death playoff will be held at a date yet to be decided.

Greaves' George Brice did his level best to make things easier for Independents last night but he found a worthy opponent in Brent Siddons.

Both pitchers yielded but two hits but Brice cracked a bit in the last scheduled inning by walking John Yankoski and Gordie Strongman. With one out, dangerous Art Worth was passed intentionally to load the bags but a passed ball, playing Yankoski, nullified the strategy.

Team Match Mat Feature

Al Costello and Roy Heffernan meet Jerry and Bobby Christy in the feature tag-team wrestling bout at Memorial Arena Saturday evening.

In other matches, Don Leo Jonathan takes on Joe Tomasso, Buddy Austin tangles with Paul Diamond, and Roy McClarty battles Gorilla Marconi.

Double Wins For Realtors

Barry Maloney doubled in two runs in the last of the ninth inning last night to give Newstead Realty a 5-4 win over Kings in the first game of their best-of-five Independent Athletic Association Softball League semi-final.

Tonight, at Central Park at 8:30, Kapski Construction and Churchill Hotel will open a best-of-three quarter-final.

Approve Bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The Nevada State Athletic Commission approved Wednesday the contracts between the Silver State Sports Club Inc. and champion Joey Giardella and Robin Hurricane Carlier, who has Oct. 23 for the middleweight crown.

Deron Johnson's 17th home run spoiled Koufax' shutout try.

Needing to win to keep from dropping well out of the race, the Yankees entrusted a big game to Mel Stottlemyre, just coming up from Richmond of the International League.

Stottlemyre pitched steadily, yielding seven hits as the Yankees won 7-3, over Chicago

White Sox and got support in the form of four home runs.

Two of them were by Mantle, who hit a tape-measure job into the centerfield bleachers which went out at the 461-foot mark and landed 15 rows up.

But the Yankees couldn't gain on the bit-in-mouth Baltimore Orioles, who raced to a 7-0 win over Boston Red Sox behind the five-hit pitching of Milt Pappas and the hitting of rookie Sam Bowens.

Bowens, who has hit safely in 10 straight games, hit his 15th and 16th home runs as the Orioles hosted their lead over the White Sox to two games.

NEEDS HIS JOB

At Los Angeles, where the Angels are intent on defending fourth place, outfielder Jim Piersall put on a little celebration of his own.

Having received word a few hours before game time that wife Mary had just given birth to their ninth child, Piersall boosted his batting average to .342 with three hits.

Durable Dozen Make Up List

Baseball Still Boasts Its 'Iron' Men

By STEVE SNIDER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Baseball still has a few "iron men" left despite the plodding game popularized by Case Stengel.

They're the unsung heroes who play every game, shrugging off minor injuries, slumps and a schedule far more wearisome than the old-timers had to face.

One of them is Brooks Robinson, a Baltimore Oriole in the rough and tumble tradition of the "old Orioles" under John McGraw way back when. And Brooks missed only one all last year, 100.

STUART LEADS

Eleven others were on the iron man list through Monday with Big Dick Stuart of the Boston Red Sox in for the most games (117).

Other American Leaguers who hadn't missed were Leon Wagner of Cleveland, Dick McAuliffe of Detroit and Bobby Knopf of the Los Angeles Angels.

Seven of the durable dozen were National Leaguers—Billy Williams of the Chicago Cubs, Richie Allen and Johnny Callison of Philadelphia, Ken Boyer and Curt Flood of St. Louis, Leo Cardenas of Cincinnati and Bill Mazeroski of Pittsburgh.

NO CATCHERS

Williams, Flood, Wagner and Callison are outfielders. Robinson, Boyer and Allen are third basemen; McAuliffe and Cardenas are shortstops; Mazeroski and Knopf play second base and Stuart first.

Among those who had missed only one were Bobby Richardson of the Yankees, Willie Mays of San Francisco, Hank Aaron of Milwaukee, Dick Howser of Cleveland, Dick Groat of St. Louis and Ron Santo of the Cubs.

Santo, Bill White of the Cardinals and Vada Pinson of Cincinnati were the only major leaguers who went all the way last year. Robinson sat down only once for Baltimore to lead the American League.

The list for this year is bigger than it was at a similar stage last season, presumably due to hot pennant races in both leagues.

The Phillies aren't about to rest Callison's big bat or dispense with rookie Allen's services around third place and at bat unless a dire emergency forces a rest. Boyer and Flood are vital to Cardinal hopes and the Reds need Cardenas in the infield as long as he can make more than a year ago. Even Willie Mays is more of an iron man than he'd like to be as the Baltimore's bid to unseat the Giants struggle for the flat.

Tourist Men 'Sell' B.C.

CALGARY—British Columbia took southern Alberta by storm Tuesday as two goodwill tourist groups set up shop to lure tourists to the West.

In Calgary, an eight-man contingent headed by Ken Woodward of the B.C. Travel Bureau, and Reeve Alan Emmott of Burnaby led the tour, while to the south, in Medicine Hat, Ron Gadsby of the B.C. Recreation and Conservation Department, and Alderman Robert Baird of Victoria, led a seven-man group.

BOOST HIGHWAY

The B.C. groups are in Alberta to boost the next No. 3 Highway route to the West Coast. The Kootenay skyway section of the highway will be opened officially at a ceremony at the summit, 20 miles west of Creston, Saturday.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett and his entire cabinet will meet there in what has been described as "the world's highest summit" meeting. The meeting, with the opening, will take place at the 5,900-foot level.

In all, three B.C. goodwill groups will be at the opening. Another group has made a swing into the United States, taking in such points as Spokane and Coeur d'Alene.

OPENING SATURDAY

They all are to meet in Lethbridge Friday in preparation for the trek to Creston and the official opening Saturday.

The B.C. groups are selling the No. 3 Highway as the "Route to the coast with the most."

The group in Calgary met Mayor Grant MacEwan during the morning and presented him with a letter from Premier Bennett and with gifts from B.C. He was also invited to attend the highway opening this weekend.

Columbia Power Sales In Hands of U.S. Firm

The British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority will sign an agreement with a new United States agency in Seattle today for sale of $254,000,000 worth of Columbia River power.
The provincial cabinet Wednesday authorized the agreement between Hydro and the Columbia Storage Power Exchange, a non-profit agency set up recently in the U.S. to market power produced under the Columbia River Treaty.
The agreement will run until midnight of March 31, 2003, but the power exchange will pay the money by Oct. 1 of this year.
Under the pact, Hydro agrees to construct three storage dams on the Columbia "in a good and workmanlike manner."
It also agrees to have the first dam, at Duncan Lake, B.C., fully operative by April 1, 1968.
The Arrow Lakes dam, next in line, is to be ready a year later, and Mica Creek, biggest of the three dams, is to be operative by April 1, 1973.

Girls Go Bugs over Beatles

Hard Day's Night Really Was

TORONTO (CP) — It was, as one shaken movie critic later recounted, an "unmoving experience which I'm not going to forget in a hurry."

Thousands of Toronto teenagers screamed, chanted and stamped their way through 86 minutes of the Beatles' film debut, A Hard Day's Night.

They drowned out the sound image of drummer Ringo Starr track. In one theatre, a young girl approached the screen in a trance-like walk, touched the side of the theatres all day.

COMING OF AGE

With Sally Hamilton

We were in Bermuda waiting for a floral pageant parade. Seated on specially constructed bleachers. The woman beside me might have been a young 70. Her graying hair still showed enough auburn that there could be no doubt of her fair coloring; and she wore a bright print dress that might have been borrowed from her granddaughter.

She was a Canadian, said her name was Anglin—Ethel Anglin—that she was a widow and was travelling with a friend. She had wanted to see Bermuda because, "I have a special interest in countries of the Commonwealth."

Extra Money

She was taking this holiday because, she said, "I'm a good cook." Then she smiled. "You see, I have a small catering business now that I'm living alone and it provides the extra money for me to travel a bit."

She had grown up in a small town and married young. A good housekeeper in those days had to sew and cook. She made her own bread and cakes, did up her preserves, made the children's clothes and her own. "We had a large family so I had plenty of practice."

Ethel Anglin had worked out her own "second career" and talked on about it for a good half hour.

Husband Died

It was only when her husband died suddenly after an early retirement that she fully realized she was no longer the centre of her family's life. It had taken time for her to change her thinking.

"Before, I had been Herbert's wife, the children's mother. But then I began to wonder who was the real me."

The young people saw no problem. They would have been quite happy if she had spent her time visiting each one in turn. She tried this and it didn't turn out too badly—once around.

Good Family

They were a good family and they loved their mother. But this was different to needing her. Some of the time they even treated her as if she were a slightly backward child. Of course, at other times they did ask her to bake some of her luscious rolls for their company dinners; or to make over an old coat into a smaller edition for Junior.

"At home all I had to do was to get my own meals and keep my place in order. It wasn't enough. So I turned to my old love—baking. I'd make a batch of bread and take a fresh loaf to my granddaughter who lives near me. Sometimes I'd give one to my neighbor who has several youngsters. They all made such a fuss over that home-made bread that I'd get all puffed up over it."

"Occasionally a friend would ask me to bake something special, and would offer to pay for it. But I couldn't charge. This made it a bit uncomfortable for both of us."

Urged on by her friends, Ethel decided to make up a list of her specialties and set prices for them. After that, she had no difficulty keeping busy.

One summer, when things had dropped off a bit, she made some pickles. But it was Christmas cakes that really put her in business.

"That first year I made 100 pounds of Christmas cakes. I made it from a recipe I had worked out for myself over the years. Of course, I use only top quality ingredients."

"I buy wholesale; then I sell at the same prices as the best bakeries. Now I have it down to a science. I know how large a batch I can bake at a time. I know small cakes sell better than large ones—and so on."

"Do I make money? Well, I'm here! And I have some orders right now for next Christmas."

Ethel's profit from her little business varies from month to month but it nets her enough that, when fancy strikes her, she can make tracks for such places as Bermuda.

Consulting Her

Something she didn't foresee was the effect that her activity had on her family. They are proud of her, naturally, but more than that. They are consulting her, once again, about family problems.

When she gets a bit more to do than she can handle, one of the younger people will give her a hand preparing fruit for Christmas cakes, chopping pickles or just washing up. When a customer just can't call for an order, one of the family delivers it.

The exciting thing is they see her now as a going concern, not as a dear old lady who needs to be pampered.

Sally Hamilton has obtained Mrs. A's recipe for her Christmas cake. If you'd care to try it, send Sally 10c, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Jones Dog Still Lost

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Jones, 2310 Wark Street, lost their dog a month ago and they are looking for information that may help in recovering it.

"He's a very friendly golden Labrador," said Mrs. Jones, "and somebody may have thought he was a stray, but we want him back." The dog answers to the name Butch.

Boy Drowns

Tragedy Shatters Reunion

A family reunion in Oak Bay ended in tragedy Wednesday when the youngest member, 15-month-old Alan Cross of Winnipeg, drowned in his grandparents' back garden at 2835 Tod Road.

Alan Cross

The boy had crawled head-first into a crock which he, his two brothers and sister had partially filled with water with a garden hose the day before.

His mother, Mrs. George Cross, saw her son's feet sticking above the crock when she looked out the window of her parents' house.

Her efforts to revive the boy through artificial respiration were continued with the arrival of fireman Ray Burley, 267 Wildwood. He gave the child mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on the scene and on the way to Royal Jubilee Hospital in an Oak Bay police car.

The boy was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

The Cross family came here last week for the golden wedding anniversary of Mrs. Cross' parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. James. Mr. Cross, who had gone back to Winnipeg, was scheduled to return to Victoria by plane Wednesday night.

Mrs. Cross, her children, and her parents, meanwhile, were put under sedation.

The other children in the family are Janet, 6, Peter, 4, and Jamie, 8.

In Seven Sisters, Man., Tuesday a 13-month-old girl drowned in a five-gallon pail of water at her parents' home. Police said Edith Deywell was believed to have been leaning over the container when she slipped and fell in.

No One Injured

GALLIANO — Heavy damage but no injury was reported when cars driven by Miss Beth Gillanders of Vancouver and James Graham of Galliano collided on North End Road on Monday.

Hospital Meeting

Regional Council To Be Explored

Exploratory talks on formation of a regional hospital council will be held between administrators of Royal Jubilee, St. Joseph's, Rest Haven, Gorge Road, and Queen Alexandra Solarium hospitals tonight.

The meeting is the second in a series of exploratory talks, following a proposal by Health Minister Eric Martin to hospital administrators that a council be set up.

If talks are successful the hospital council will be separate from the joint services board which has been proposed by Dan Campbell, minister of municipal affairs.

Administrators will be working on a plan for the best method of expansion of facilities for the whole of southern Vancouver Island.

There will be no provincial government representative at the meeting, which will be held in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Costumes For Windup

Ignoring Sign Brings $20 Fine

The Keep Right Except to Pass signs have the force of law behind them, as one driver found out in provincial magistrate's court Wednesday. James McAnena, 1205 Queens, was fined $20 for a centre-lane ride in the Malahat-Bamberton area Aug. 2.

After Stormy Meeting

Mini-Metro Board Now Up to Voters

By IAN SMITH

The proposed mini-metro scheme weathered a stormy meeting Wednesday night, but not before some residents of the Langford-Colwood-Metchosin area gave it a severe verbal mauling.

A segment of those attending an all-candidates meeting at Belmont High School spoke strongly in favor of a yes-or-no vote over mini-metro in the area, but in the end were defeated in an attempt to have the meeting adopt a motion supporting the idea.

Several of those attending the meeting took advantage of a discussion period to assert that the scheme proposed by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell was "being rammed down our throats."

One man expressed the opinion that "it seems as if we're not going to get a chance to say whether we want this thing or not — we're just going to get it."

"All we're getting is a chance to vote for candidates for a board, but we're not able to vote on whether or not we actually want this board in the first place," he said.

Appointment Queried

Others at the meeting referred to the fact that Mr. Campbell had said that if candidates weren't nominated for the group that will study the scheme, he would appoint them.

Prior to public discussion, the candidates had taken two general views: that the joint services board was a good thing and bound to come, or that the idea of the board should be studied before deciding whether it was worthwhile or not.

Some said the three districts should stand together and look after common interests instead of trying to obtain favors just for one area, and most spoke in favor of keeping the proposed board non-political.

Strong Opposition

His opponent in Colwood, H. F. Williams, spoke strongly against the way in which the plan had been presented. "My lie is up," he thundered. "It appears as if we're going to get mini-metro whether we like it or not, and I'm opposed to this."

"I'll cry from the rooftops if this is the case."

He suggested the board members from the three areas "stick together. We're going to be confronted by the more experienced people from other areas such as Saanich, and we must work together for this district."

F. H. Boulter (Langford) said that he was "going into this with an open mind; I'll study the proposal, and if there is something I don't like I'll try and change it."

Several Advantages

The third Langford candidate, R. H. Willing, suggested the board might help people get value for their taxes, and said that "the board has several advantages if used correctly."

W. G. Meakes (Metchosin) spent most of his time explaining the proposed functions of the joint board, and the study group that will establish its jurisdiction.

"There will be an increase in taxes," he predicted. "When this board starts projects, you will have to pay for them."

His opponent, K. J. Rainey, elaborated upon his "greenbelt" proposal which he advanced in a letter to Metchosin property-owners this week.

"Metchosin is in a very good position to be properly zoned and planned," he said. "It can be reserved for recreational facilities and farmland."

"I want to see it kept as a rural district, beneficial for the whole southern island."

The meeting was chaired by Stan Hisecock.

Voting will take place Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the district. Besides Colwood, Metchosin and Langford, there will be voting in North Saanich and View Royal.

polling places will be located in elementary schools in the various areas with the exception of North Saanich, which will utilize North Saanich secondary school in addition to Sanabury elementary school.

However, accommodation has not yet been found for the students, who will be arriving in Vancouver at the end of the week.

Many hobbies Mr. Shizawa names as his hobbies "every kind of sports, music — classics to jazz, jewel polishing, reading novels, playing the mandolin, writing essays, English," while Mr. Tasaka, an economist, plays several sports and the ukulele.

The students will require room and board for about eight months during the winter session.

'Response Terrific' To Langford Plea

Alex Olson says the response has been "terrific" to his plea against incorporation in the Langford area.

"We have about 300 names now," he said, "and more are coming in every day."

Mr. Olson, 731 Goldstream Avenue, appealed through the Colonist recently for those who support his stand against incorporation to get in touch with him at GR 8-1212.

He said that he felt people were also concerned about mini-metro. "They feel they don't know what it's all about, and the people are concerned about whether or not they'll get a chance to vote for or against organization."

Declines Comment

Bus Fare Fight 'PUC Question'

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Wednesday said the fight against proposed bus fare increases is "not a question right now for the government, but is a question for the PUC."

The minister declined comment on a report that the provincial cabinet has turned down a municipal request for a complete study of transportation, including transit, in Greater Victoria and Vancouver.

Mayor R. B. Wilson was unavailable for comment.

Victoria and Vancouver officials had asked for the meeting with the cabinet in their fight against proposed bus fare increases in the cities.

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority is seeking permission of the PUC to hike bus fares to a minimum of 25 cents to offset annual deficits. Present fare is 13 cents in Victoria, 15 cents in Vancouver.

The report also said that negotiations between B.C. Hydro and the officials of the two cities for a compromise increase to 20 cents have broken down. The municipalities had proposed the compromise.

"I am pleased that the municipalities are talking about this problem," Mr. Campbell said. "Some time ago they weren't talking at all."

MEETING TODAY

Meanwhile, Victoria and Vancouver civic leaders were to meet today in Vancouver to plan new action in the light of two letters sent by the PUC to B.C. Hydro.

Mayor Wilson, who released copies of the letters Tuesday, said they show the commission's hands have been effectively tied by the provincial cabinet.

Law Professor To Arbitrate

A UBC law professor has been appointed chairman of the arbitration board which will discuss the thorny issue of the appointment of the Saanich fire chief.

The hearing, which will be chaired by Prof. R. J. Herbert, has been set for Sept. 1.

Other members of the board are Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm, who was nominated by Saanich municipality and Vancouver lawyer Charles R. Maclean who was nominated by the firemen's union.

NAMED CHAIRMAN

The two board members then agreed on Prof. Herbert as chairman.

Under discussion will be whether Saanich's elected officials or the firemen's union has the say in who is appointed as fire chief.

The issue was tied off May 5 when Saanich council announced the appointment of first-class Victoria fireman Joseph Sutherland, 32, to the head of the fire department to replace retiring fire chief Joseph Law.

Council was acting on the advice of Lamond, Dewhurst and Associates, Vancouver personnel and management consultants.

The appointment was objected to by two councillors, Harold Todd and Leslie Passmore.

Arguments for the union will be presented by John Gault and D. A. M. Patterson will represent the municipality.

The board will first hear arguments then must decide whether the issue should be put to arbitration.

The hearing will be held in Saanich municipal hall at 10:30 a.m.

Works Plan Defended

British Columbia spent $2,000,000 last year assisting winter work programs. Of that amount only $100,000 was for welfare cases.

This just isn't good enough, says Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

Defending the provincial government's new policy on winter works, Mr. Campbell said that municipalities are going to have to look harder and dig deeper to find "unemployed employables."

POLICY ATTACKED

The new policy has been attacked by municipal leaders and will, according to Mayor R. B. Wilson and Ald. A. W.

Toome, cost Victoria $110,000 in the coming year.

It provides that the provincial government will pay 50 per cent of winter works labor costs only if the men employed have been on social assistance for at least three months.

TIMING SAID POOR

Particular target of municipal criticism has been the timing of the new B.C. regulations. Municipal leaders contend that the new rule was sprung on them unexpectedly and long after they had made up their budgets and appropriations for the coming winter programs.

Mr. Campbell Wednesday said that there are 6,000 single men and 3,300 married men on social assistance who can work on winter programs.

Prior to the new regulation B.C. has paid 25 per cent of winter works labor programs unconditionally and 50 per cent if welfare cases were employed.

Ottawa paid another 50 per cent.

TASTY AND COLORFUL EGG SALAD ROYALE

Egg Salad Colorful

Devilled eggs are traditional for summer menus. But we hope you'll go on from there to make—and enjoy—a wonderful new salad called Egg Salad Royale.

What makes it special? For one thing, the egg salad touches given by chopped parsley and pimiento. These add flavor, too! Another is the fresh presentation. To give the salad form and shape, it is pressed into custard cups before unmolding on leaf lettuce.

Simple garnishing touches add to the taste appeal of Egg Salad Royale.

To make the cucumber garnish, first score unpeeled cucumbers with a fork by running the lines down the length of the cucumber. Slice thinly. Then make a slit from the outside edge to the centre, and twist.

EGG SALAD ROYALE
Eight hard-boiled eggs, chopped; ½ cup chopped celery; 2 tablespoons chopped parsley; 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento; ½ cup salad dressing; salt and pepper; lettuce; peeled tomato wedges; thin cucumber twists; watercress.

Combine the eggs, celery, parsley, pimiento and salad dressing. Mix lightly, seasoning to taste. Press into four custard cups.

For each serving unmold one cup on lettuce on a salad plate. Garnish with tomato wedges and cucumber twists. Top with a sprig of watercress.

Uncooked Relish Has Tomato Base

Now is the time that most of our favorite fruits and vegetables are available in the "home grown" category and of course many people are already thinking of their choice recipes for chutney, pickles, preserves and chili sauce. It is always worth while trying one or two new recipes, and here is one for pickled carrots:

PICKLED CARROTS
(about 2 pints)
One quart of carrots (small and uniform in size); water; 3 cups white vinegar; 1 cup sugar; 3 tablespoons mixed pickling spice.
Cook the carrots in water to cover until the skins slip easily and the carrots are half done. Peel.

Boil together for ten minutes the vinegar, one half cup of water, the sugar and the spices (dried in cheesecloth). Remove the spice.

Add the carrots and boil for four minutes or until nearly tender. Pack in hot sterile jars. Pour the syrup over them and then seal.

Beets are another favorite, and here is a good recipe:

PICKLED BEETS
(about 2 pints)
Two pounds beets; 1½ cups cider vinegar; 1½ teaspoons dry mustard; ½ teaspoon salt; 1½ cups sugar; 2 medium onions sliced; 2 teaspoons celery seed.
Cook the beets in water to cover, until tender. Drain, reserving one cup of liquid. Peel and slice.
Heat the vinegar and the reserved cooking liquid to the boil. Mix the mustard, salt and sugar and add to the vinegar, bring to the boil again.
Arrange the beets and the onions in layers in clean jars. Add the celery seed and cover with the hot vinegar mixture. Seal, cool and store in the refrigerator. Allow to stand for a few days before using. Incidentally, the beets will keep for weeks in the refrigerator.

Tomatoes are at their best these days, so why not try a good relish recipe that does not require any cooking:

TOMATO RELISH
(4 pints)
Two cups chopped peeled tomatoes; 1 cup chopped celery; ½ cup chopped onion; ½ cup chopped green pepper; 2 teaspoons salt; 3 tablespoons sugar; 1 tablespoon mustard seed; ¼ teaspoon nutmeg; ¼ teaspoon cinnamon; ¼ teaspoon ground cloves; 1 cup mild cider vinegar.
Mix all the ingredients thoroughly—pour into sterile jars and cover. Refrigerate. Allow to stand for two to three weeks. I think the last recipe is a real meaty one, but it is well worth trying.
Bon appetit!

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am 28 years old and have a good job in a department store. Since I was a kid I've had a bad limp which has made me self-conscious. I wasn't able to work up the nerve to ask a girl for a date until I was 20 years old.

Last year I began to take out a girl who works in the store. Bernice gave me a lot of confidence in myself. Until I met her I never thought I was interesting enough to hold a girl's attention.

Bernice is 24, has been married and divorced. She is full of pep, good company and says she is crazy about me. I gave her a diamond engagement ring for Valentine's Day and we plan to be married in October.

Lately I've been hearing a lot of talk about Bernice and the floor walker, Bernice and the shoe buyer, Bernice and the window trimmer, to name just a few. She has told me several lies and now I see other things that didn't add up.

I'm afraid to have a showdown for fear she will break off with me. I couldn't take that. I'm hoping she will settle down after marriage. Any advice?—HOPING.

Dear Hoping: Bernice isn't playing it straight and you know it. Better to face reality now than to marry the girl and wonder where she is—and with whom.

In the department store business there's an old adage—"The first mark-down is the cheapest." This adage applies to people as well as merchandise.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 44-year-old divorcee, and much too old for this sort of problem. I accepted a job as a receptionist, secretary and bookkeeper for a friend who has had severe financial reverses. I'm working at a fraction of my former salary because I want to help him get on his feet. The man has a lovely wife and family and he truly deserves a break.

Our most important customer is an octopus. He comes in several times a week, follows me around the office like a puppy-dog, and makes passes left and right. The house is getting colder and colder by the day and I am sick of it.

If he weren't so important to the business I'd give him a crack in the mouth and call it a day, but we need his account. How can I get him to leave me alone and still keep him friendly—at the business level?—TIED OF RUNNING AROUND THE DECK.

Dear Tied of Running: If the entire future of the business hinges on the account of this eight-handed idiot you might as well lock the door now.

The man didn't give the firm his account because of you—and he probably will not take his account away if you chill him. So go ahead—and let the teeth fall where they may.

Boy Drowns

Tragedy Shatters Reunion

A family reunion in Oak Bay ended in tragedy Wednesday when the youngest member, 15-month-old Alan Cross of Winnipeg, drowned in his grandparents' back garden at 2835 Tod Road.

Alan Cross

The boy had crawled head-first into a crock which he, his two brothers and sister had partially filled with water with a garden hose the day before.

His mother, Mrs. George Cross, saw her son's feet sticking above the crock when she looked out the window of her parents' house.

Her efforts to revive the boy through artificial respiration were continued with the arrival of fireman Ray Burley, 287 Wildwood. He gave the child mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on the scene and on the way to Royal Jubilee Hospital in an Oak Bay police car.

The boy was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

The Cross family came here last week for the golden wedding anniversary of Mrs. Cross' parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. James. Mr. Cross, who had gone back to Winnipeg, was scheduled to return to Victoria by plane Wednesday night.

Mrs. Cross, her children, and her parents, meanwhile, were put under sedation.

The other children in the family are Janet, 6, Peter, 4, and Jamie, 8.

Tourist Rush Slowing

The tourist rush that hit Victoria during the last few nights seems to be petering out, at least temporarily.

A spokesman for the emergency information service said last night the office had received about 60 calls during the evening and laterally callers were having to accept accommodation in private homes.

There were some vacancies at motels earlier in the evening, the spokesman said.

"There should be no one sleeping in cars tonight," he said.

The numbers at the centre are 386-1308 and 386-1309.

Young Blood Perks Up Donor Clinic

It was like "old times" at the Red Cross blood donor clinic Wednesday night as donors filed in and gave a total of 350 pints of blood, bringing the two-day total to 725 pints.

"This is the best clinic we have had in years," said a Red Cross spokesman.

Credit was given to young people who showed up at the clinic.

"There were a lot of new faces and they seemed thrilled with the prospect of helping," the spokesman said.

"It was just like old times."

'Dig Deeper' Urges Campbell

Works Plan Defended

British Columbia spent $2,000,000 last year assisting winter work programs. Of that amount only $300,000 was for welfare cases.

This just isn't good enough, says Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

Defending the provincial government's new policy on winter works, Mr. Campbell said that municipalities are going to have to look harder and dig deeper to find "unemployed employables."

POLICY ATTACKED

The new policy has been attacked by municipal leaders and will, according to Mayor R. B. Wilson and Ald. A. W.

Towne, cost Victoria $110,000 in the coming year.

It provides that the provincial government will pay 50 per cent of winter works labor costs only if the men employed have been on social assistance for at least three months.

FINING LAID POOR

Particular target of municipal criticism has been the timing of the new B.C. regulations. Municipal leaders contend that the new rule was sprung on them unexpectedly and long after they had made up their budgets and appropriations for the coming winter programs.

Mr. Campbell Wednesday said that there are 4,630 single men and 3,300 married men on social assistance who can work on winter programs.

Prior to the new regulation B.C. has paid 25 per cent of winter works labor programs unconditionally and 50 per cent if welfare cases were employed. Ottawa paid another 50 per cent.

Mr. Campbell gave figures, obtained he said, from the social welfare department, for the number of single men across the province who could work.

Hospital Meeting

Regional Council To Be Explored

Exploratory talks on formation of a regional hospital council will be held between administrators of Royal Jubilee, St. Joseph's, Rest Haven, George Road, and Queen Alexandra hospitals tonight.

The meeting is the second in a series of exploratory talks, following a proposal by Health Minister Eric Martin to hospital administrators that a council be set up.

If talks are successful the hospital council will be separate from the joint services board which has been proposed by Dan Campbell, minister of municipal affairs.

Administrators will be working on a plan for the best method of expansion of facilities for the whole of southern Vancouver Island.

There will be no provincial government representative at the meeting, which will be held in St. Joseph's Hospital.

After Stormy Meeting

Mini-Metro Board Now Up to Voters

By IAN SMITH

The proposed mini-metro scheme weathered a stormy meeting Wednesday night, but not before some residents of the Langford-Colwood-Metchosin area gave it a severe verbal mauling.

A segment of those attending an all-candidates meeting at Belmont High School spoke strongly in favor of a yes-or-no vote over mini-metro in the area, but in the end were defeated in an attempt to have the meeting adopt a motion supporting the idea.

Several of those attending the meeting took advantage of a discussion period to assert that the scheme proposed by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell was "being rammed down our throats."

One man expressed the opinion that "it seems as if we're not going to get a chance to say whether we want this thing or not — we're just going to get it."

"All we're getting is a chance to vote for candidates for a board, but we're not able to vote on whether or not we actually want this board in the first place," he said.

Appointment Queried

Others at the meeting referred to the fact that Mr. Campbell had said that if candidates weren't nominated for the group that will study the scheme, he would appoint them.

Prior to public discussion, the candidates had taken two general views: that the joint services board was a good thing and bound to come, or that the idea of the board should be studied before deciding whether it was worthwhile or not.

Some said the three districts should stand together and look after common interests instead of trying to obtain favors just for one area, and most spoke in favor of keeping the proposed board non-political.

Several of the speakers were quite bombastic about the subject, while others spoke quietly for their allotted 10 minutes.

By districts, the candidates spoke along the following lines:

William Reader (Colwood) said that he was "vitaly interested" in the scheme, and it could be "a mighty good thing if the proper people are elected — people who will make an intelligent study of the proposals."

He was concerned that the board proposal seemed to have clashed with a study of incorporation in the area, causing some confusion, and said that he felt "the government would have been better advised to bring in some experts to study the idea (of the joint services board) before presenting it to us."

Strong Opposition

His opponent in Colwood, H. F. Williams, spoke strongly against the way in which the plan had been presented. "My ire is up," he thundered. "It appears as if we're going to get mini-metro whether we like it or not, and I'm opposed to this."

"I'll cry from the house tops if this is the case."

He suggested the board members from the three areas "stick together. We're going to be confronted by the more experienced people from other areas such as Saanich, and we must work together for this district."

F. H. Boulter (Langford) said that he was "going into this with an open mind; I'll study the proposal, and if there is something I don't like I'll try and change it."

Several Advantages

The third Langford candidate, R. H. Welling, suggested the board might help people get value for their taxes, and said that "the board has several advantages if used correctly."

W. G. Meakes (Metchosin) spent most of his time explaining the proposed functions of the joint board, and the study group that will establish its jurisdiction.

"There will be an increase in taxes," he predicted. "When this board starts projects, you will have to pay for them."

His opponent, K. J. Rainey, elaborated upon his "green belt" proposal which he advanced in a letter to Metchosin property-owners this week.

"Metchosin is in a very good position to be properly zoned and planned," he said. "It can be reserved for recreational facilities and farmland."

"I want to see it kept as a rural district, beneficial for the whole southern island."

The meeting was chaired by Stan Hiseock.

Voting will take place Saturday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the district. Besides Colwood, Metchosin and Langford, there will be voting in North Saanich and View Royal.

Polling places will be located in elementary schools in the various areas with the exception of North Saanich, which will utilize North Saanich secondary school in addition to Samsbury elementary school.

'Response Terrific' To Langford Plea

Alex Olson says the response has been "terrific" to his plea against incorporation in the Langford area.

"We have about 300 names now," he said, "and more are coming in every day."

Mr. Olson, 731 Goldstream Avenue, appealed through the Colonist recently for those who support his stand against incorporation to get in touch with him at GR 8-1212.

He said that he felt people were also concerned about mini-metro. "They feel they don't know what it's all about, and the people are concerned about whether or not they'll get a chance to vote for or against organization."

Declines Comment

Bus Fare Fight 'PUC Question'

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Wednesday said the fight against proposed bus fare increases is "not a question right now for the government, but is a question for the PUC."

The minister declined comment on a report that the provincial cabinet has turned down a municipal request for a complete study of transportation, including transit, in Greater Victoria and Vancouver.

MAYOR UNAVAILABLE

Mayor R. B. Wilson was unavailable for comment.

Victoria and Vancouver officials had asked for the meeting with the cabinet in their fight against proposed bus fare increases in the city.

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority is seeking permission of the PUC to hike bus fares to a minimum of 25 cents to offset annual deficits. Present fare is 13 cents in Victoria, 15 cents in Vancouver.

The report also said that negotiations between B.C. Hydro and the officials of the two cities for a compromise increase to 20 cents have broken down. The municipalities had proposed the compromise.

"I am pleased that the municipalities are talking about this problem," Mr. Campbell said. "Some time ago they weren't talking at all."

MEETING TODAY

Meanwhile, Victoria and Vancouver civic leaders were to meet today in Vancouver to plan new action in the light of two letters sent by the PUC to B.C. Hydro.

Mayor Wilson, who released copies of the letters Tuesday, said they show the commission's hands have been effectively tied by the provincial cabinet.

Law Professor To Arbitrate

A UBC law professor has been appointed chairman of the arbitration board which will discuss the thorny issue of the appointment of the Saanich fire chief.

The hearing, which will be chaired by Prof. R. J. Herbert, has been set for Sept. 1.

Other members of the board are Victoria lawyer Louis Lindholm who was nominated by Saanich municipality and Vancouver lawyer Charles R. Maclean who was nominated by the firemen's union.

NAMED CHAIRMAN

The two board members then agreed on Prof. Herbert as chairman.

Under discussion will be whether Saanich's elected officials or the firemen's union has the say in who is appointed as fire chief.

The issue was tied off May 5 when Saanich council announced the appointment of first-class Victoria fireman Joseph Sutherland, 52, to the head of the fire department to replace retiring fire chief Joseph Law.

Council was acting on the advice of Lamond, Dewhurst and Associates, Vancouver personnel and management consultants.

The appointment was objected to by two councillors, Harold Todd and Leslie Passmore.

Arguments for the union will be presented by John Gauk and D. A. M. Patterson who represent the municipality.

The board will first hear arguments then must decide whether the issue should be put to arbitration.

The hearing will be held in Saanich municipal hall at 10:30 a.m.

TASTY AND COLORFUL EGG SALAD ROYALE

Egg Salad Colorful

Devilled eggs are traditional for summer menus. But we hope you'll go on from there to make—and enjoy—a wonderful new salad called Egg Salad Royale.

What makes it special? For one thing, the gay color touches given by chopped parsley and pimiento. These add flavor, too. Another is the fresh presentation. To give the salad form and shape, it is pressed into custard cups before unmolding on leaf lettuce.

Simple garnishing touches add to the taste appeal of Egg Salad Royale.

To make the cucumber garnish, first score unpeeled cucumbers with a fork by running the lines down the length of the cucumber. Slice thinly. Then make a slit from the outside edge to the centre, and twist.

EGG SALAD ROYALE

Eight hard-cooked eggs; 1 cup chopped celery; 2 tablespoons chopped parsley; 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento; 1/4 cup salad dressing; salt and pepper; lettuce; peeled tomato wedges; thin cucumber twists; watercress.

Combine the eggs, celery, parsley, pimiento and salad dressing. Mix lightly, seasoning to taste. Press into four custard cups.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am 28 years old and have a good job in a department store. Since I was a kid I've had a bad limp which has made me self-conscious. I wasn't able to work up the nerve to ask a girl for a date until I was 20 years old.

Last year I began to take out a girl who works in the store. Bernice gave me a lot of confidence in myself. Until I met her I never thought I was interesting enough to hold a girl's attention.

Bernice is 24, has been married and divorced. She is full of pep, good company and says she is crazy about me. I gave her a diamond engagement ring for Valentine's Day and we plan to be married in October.

Lately I've been hearing a lot of talk about Bernice and the floor walker, Bernice and the shoe buyer, Bernice and the window trimmer, to name just a few. She has told me several lies and now I see other things that didn't add up.

I'm afraid to have a showdown for fear she will break off with me. I couldn't take that. I'm hoping she will settle down after marriage. Any advice?—HOPING.

Dear Hoping: Bernice isn't playing it straight and you know it. Better to face reality now than to marry the girl and wonder where she is—and with whom. In the department store build-

Man in the Kitchen

Uncooked Relish Has Tomato Base

Now is the time that most of our favorite fruits and vegetables are available in the "home grown" category and of course many people are already thinking of their choice recipes for chutney, pickles, preserves and chili sauce. It is always worth while trying one or two new recipes, and here is one for pickled carrots:

PICKLED CARROTS
(about 2 pints)
One quart of carrots (small and uniform in size); water; 3 cups white vinegar; 1 cup sugar; 3 tablespoons mixed pickling spice.

Cook the carrots in water to cover until the skins slip easily and the carrots are half done. Peel.

Boil together for ten minutes

the vinegar, one half cup of water, the sugar and the spice (tied in cheesecloth). Remove the spice.

Add the carrots and boil for four minutes or until nearly tender. Pack in hot sterile jars. Pour the syrup over them and then seal.

Beets are another favorite, and here is a good recipe:

PICKLED BEETS
(about 2 pints)
Two pounds beets; 1 1/2 cups cider vinegar; 1 1/2 teaspoons dry mustard; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1 1/2 cups sugar; 2 medium onions sliced; 2 teaspoons celery seed.

Cook the beets in water to cover, until tender. Drain, reserving one cup of liquid. Peel and slice.

Heat the vinegar and the reserved cooking liquid to the boil. Mix the mustard, salt and sugar and add to the vinegar, bring to the boil again.

Arrange the beets and the onions in layers in clean jars. Add the celery seed and cover with the hot vinegar mixture. Seal, cool and store in the refrigerator. Allow to stand for a few days before using. Incidentally, the beets will keep for weeks in the refrigerator.

Tomatoes are at their best these days, so why not try a good relish recipe that does not require any cooking:

(4 pints)

Two cups chopped peeled tomatoes; 1 cup chopped celery; 1/2 cup chopped onion; 1/2 cup chopped green pepper; 2 teaspoons salt; 3 tablespoons sugar; 1 tablespoon mustard seed; 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg; 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon; 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves; 1 cup mild cider vinegar.

Mix all the ingredients thoroughly—pour into sterile jars and cover. Refrigerate. Allow to stand for two to three weeks.

Four Generations

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Lorraine Carruthers, "Ealowinna," 1258 St. Patrick Street, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday with a family dinner party at their home—a month ahead of the actual day.

Four generations of the immediate family will be present at the golden-wedding party—the Carruthers' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rendle (Ellice) of Vancouver; the Rendle's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Russell of Nanaimo, and their children, Allan and Betty.

Also in Victoria for the celebration will be a son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Carruthers of Creston, B.C., with their children, Karen, Laird, Murray and Lorraine; a son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Houghton (Lorraine) of Kamloops with Gordon and Winona; a son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Embleton (Winona) of Kamloops, with Jean, Dennis and Peter, and a son, Mr. Harry Carruthers, Vancouver.

Mrs. Carruthers' brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Orr will be here from Vancouver and her sister, Mrs. Earl Odell from Portland, Ore. Mr. Carruthers' brother-in-law, John S. Murray is coming from Sarina, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. R. Russell from New Brunswick.

Mr. Carruthers was born in 1879 in Sarina, Ont., and later attended the University of Toronto.

He retired as deputy minister of public works for British Columbia in 1948.

Mrs. Carruthers, born Winona Orr, in 1885 at North Battleford, served the Anglican Church of Canada as a teacher at the Hay River Indian Mission near Great Slave Lake. After seven years there she came to Victoria and entered the Royal Jubilee Hospital school of nursing. She graduated in 1909.

Before her marriage on Sept. 15, 1914, in Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver, Mrs. Carruthers was matron of King's Daughters' Hospital in Duncan.

Couple to Reside In Prince George

After a honeymoon trip to the Okanagan, Banff and Calgary, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Ted Kadatz will make their home at Prince George.

Dr. Mortimer Lees officiated at their marriage in Centennial United Church.

The bride, the former Carol Nadine Crooks, is the daughter of Mrs. M. Crooks, 164 Cambridge Street, and the late Joseph Crooks. Groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kadatz, 450 Dallas Road.

Mr. Barry D. Crooks gave his sister in marriage. A full Watson train was dramatic highlight to her floor-length gown of nylon organza over tulle that had a semi-controlled skirt, a sabrina neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. Touches of French embroidery accented the bodice and skirt. A four-tier elbow-length veil misted from a dainty headpiece that featured a French hand-made rose and stephanotis spray. Red roses and ivy were in her bouquet.

Bell-skirted gowns of pink peau de sauto were choice of the two bridesmaids, the Misses Donna Duncan and Norma Lewis. They wore drop pearl necklets and matching earrings, gifts of the bride, and carried bouquets of white carnations and ivy.

Mr. Albert Torgerson was best man, and ushering guests was Mr. David Crooks, brother of the bride.

Garden Notes

Weeds Lie Dormant

By M. V. CHERNUT, FRAS

We have two flower beds in our garden which, until this spring, had never been dug-over since we moved in more than 15 years ago. They were planted up with perennials, mostly the well-behaved, non-aggressive kinds, and as they put on an acceptable show every year, we just let them go their own way without any fussing except staking where necessary, a little thinning, and an annual surface mulch of old manure to maintain the fertility of the soil.

This spring, needing space to try out some new kinds, I moved out the old plants, dug over the beds deeply, and set out the plants I was testing, and where my troubles began—weeds!

Weeds had never been a problem in these beds previously, and an occasional hand-pulling was enough to keep them reasonably clean, but this year all kinds of queer weeds we never had before are coming up by the thousands in these two beds. I find I am spending most of my gardening time on the business end of a hoe handle, but for every weed I hoe off, a dozen more spring up to take its place.

Where did these weeds come from? The seeds couldn't have blown in—not in such enormous quantities—in the short time since the bed was dug over. Obviously they must have been lying dormant in the deep soil for all these years, needing only the digging to bring them to the surface where they could germinate.

This phenomenon was very much in evidence in England following the massive bombing of World War II. The bombed areas, where deep layers of soil were thrown to the surface by the explosions, became infested immediately with weeds and wildflowers which hadn't been seen in those districts for more than 50 years. It is believed now that the seeds had been scattered and buried deeply around the turn of the century when farm lands and pastures had been taken over by encroaching urban development, and they had been resting in a dormant state ever since, needing only light and air to start them into growth.

Weed seeds seem to be able to remain dormant but retain their germ of life almost indefinitely in the lower depths of the soil, and this fact carries a sober warning to all home gardeners. If any of your weeds are permitted to go to seed now, the seeds may be buried beyond germinating depth during the course of routine cultivation, only to turn up and plague you in the years to come after the deep layer of soil is returned to the surface. Old-time English gardeners have a saying that covers this situation: "One year's seeding—seven year's weeding!"

Hoisting the weeds, then, isn't a job which can be put off to some convenient occasion—they MUST be tackled while still young and before they can set seed if the ground is to remain clean. Actually, this work isn't as strenuous as it sounds, especially if you use a small, light Dutch hoe with a really sharp blade. The Dutch hoe is stirrup-shaped, with the blade facing forward, and a simple, efficient suffling of the soil will slice off the weeds as clean as a whistle.

Dry weather is best for this operation, so the uprooted weeds will wilt and die in the sun. If rain is in the offing, they should be raked up and either burnt or assigned to the compost heap.

JOHN CROSBY on Role of Modern MP

Status Without Power

LONDON—"It's taken us 900 years to create our democratic and parliamentary system and, when you look at it, my God!" said Lord Chavasse in a TV interview.

That crisply sums up the feeling many sociologists have about not only Britain's parliament, but all of them—French, Italian, West German.

"Over the past 50 years," Anthony Sampson wrote in Anatomy of Britain, "the members (of the House of Commons) have been aware of their powers mysteriously fading away. In all European countries, the complaint has been the same."

Gorgeous Redhead Going Concern

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

Maureen O'Hara was taking the doctor to check a freckle on her lip, then to Ireland to visit an ailing aunt. Then to Hollywood, where she will star with Jimmy Stewart in a western, The Rare Breed. Maureen has just finished making love to Ben-Hur in The Affair of the Villa Fiorita. And, needless to add, looked gorgeous when I saw her at lunch.

Brucey, Miss O'Hara's 20-year-old daughter, plays a good guitar, and is currently learning to be an actress in a dramatic school. She sent a note to a friend of Maureen's: "Please give my love to that red-headed woman who tells everyone she's my mother, but really she's my sister."

Didn't astrologist Marnie Woodruff predict a boy for the Peter Sellers before the end of their first year? Britti, as you know, is expecting. It had better be a boy.

Liesel Bart received more than $500,000 and a percentage when he sold the film rights of Oliver to James Woolf. I heard something about his Blitz play coming to Broadway. It's worth seeing for the realistic air raids and the railway scene.

Warren Beatty is out and Christopher Plummer is back in Moll Flanders. The film in England would have kept Warren from being with Leslie Caron in Hollywood. And while no one at this stage believes that Warren wants to get married, it's obvious that he is very much in love with Leslie.

There was Lewis Allen lunching in the great big dining room at Pinewood, and he came over to tell me he is directing a show for Four Star pals, Charles Boyer and David Niven. It's about the great train robbery, titled Money Is for Burning, and stars Gig Young, Bob Oats and Gladys Cooper. The second unit is shooting in England. The stars will catch up with the film footage in Hollywood.

It was at Pinewood that I first met Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier. In 1937. They were co-starring in Fire Over England but that was just an ember compared to the fire blazing in their hearts. They were not yet married, each having a divorce to get through first. But, oh, were they in love!

Just as we had Judy Garland all settled in a new home in London, she trips off to Rome with the ubiquitous Mark Herman. Question: When will she go home to Hollywood to settle her divorce with Sid Luft? It wouldn't surprise me too much if she finally goes back to Sid, in spite of all her remarks about marriage with Mark. Luft was wise enough to keep Judy on the plump side. She is now too thin by half.

Today All We Have —Warns Dr. STUART ROSENBERG

Nothing we do in life, no matter how vaunted, adventurous or socially courageous, can replace the need each of us has for someone who loves us and who cares.

Ideals are indeed important, and in some respects, indispensable, for a full life. But if we lack what we need so deeply as human beings—a sense of being uniquely important because we are uniquely loved—ideals in themselves cannot satisfy our profound needs.

It is all well and good to tell people who lack love or who have not known it, to lose themselves in their devotion to work or in their dedication to community welfare. Unfortunately, we are not so constructed. We still need people—not just ideas; human beings—not concepts alone, to satisfy our human requirements.

Despite all of the love we lavish upon the world, there is no substitute for the love we must share in our own homes.

Jimmy Porter, in the play Look Back in Anger, condemns his wife for not sending flowers to the graveside of his friend's mother, because Jimmy Porter loved his friend's mother very deeply.

But what he forgot was that no love for a friend's mother can really mean very much, if there is no deep love for your own wife. He was cruel to his wife in his own way, although surely he thought he loved her.

But how could his wife love someone, whom he wanted her to love when, in the first instance, he did not love her as she wanted him to love her?

Our own homes are the laboratories of our lives. What we do there determines basically what we do when we leave home. That is why, despite all new inventions and modern designs, fads and fetishes, no one has yet invented, or will ever invent, a satisfying substitute for one's own family.

If you are fortunate enough to have a family, to have your loved ones with you and near you, do not let the opportunity slip through your fingers before it is too late.

Unfortunately, some people have not taken their families for granted that they no longer enjoy but possible relations with their own relatives.

Brothers argue and refuse to speak. Sisters quarrel and go into temper tantrums. Parents and children divide off because of some stupid financial question.

And all of us go off seeking new heroes, new examples, new models and new friendships. Some day we wake up and recognize that all that is new may glitter but it may not last.

All the friends we have acquired, the neighbors we have known, the associates with whom we identify can never replace the need for family love.

We need a home because we need a place where we can be just what we are, a place for natural and simple affections; no show, no veneered attempt at impressing others.

We need a spot on earth where the door is always open to us, where people can laugh with us, but also cry our tears when we must cry. We need the warmth of people who have watched us grow up, who have shared as no one else has our joys and our sorrows.

And if we were wise we would act now on our noblest impulses. For today is all we have. Some day, we, too, will be part of yesterday. Share your love now, while there is yet time!

Canadians take break in Hamburg

Students Love Germany

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

Although our work in Germany and our continued attempts to learn the language have kept us busy for the past two months, the Canadian students over here still have time for glimpses of other parts of the country.

"With Elmshorn as our base of operations," Coralie Feney writes in her latest letter, "We have made several side trips."

"The first of these was to Lubeck, a famous seaport formerly in the Hanseatic League of cities.

Old City

"It's amazing how old the place is," Coralie says, "some of the churches date from the 12th century."

She tells of exploring the Inner City, which is situated on an island, and remarks what a shame it is to see wonderful old churches, like the Lubeck Cathedral, damaged so badly.

Our factory wages leave us far from affluent, Coralie adds plaintively, "Lubeck is apparently famous for its marzipan, but I can't afford to get any."

Both Beatrice Flett and Coralie have made excursions to Hamburg, Germany's greatest seaport, and I was lucky enough to get there for a weekend. Hamburg is a great, sprawling, bustling city of nearly 3,000,000 which offers its visitors several contrasting profiles. All of them are fascinating.

One of the most stunning spectacles in the city is the Rathaus or city hall, which Coralie describes as "simply fabulous." The interior is all thick red carpets, gilt furniture and frescoed ceilings. Burgoineisters of former years scowl down at visitors from the walls, and statues of Mercy and Justice guard a stairway. Outside the building is grey stone worked into arches and balustrades. The gay window-boxes, which one sees everywhere in Germany, lend color, and a gorgeous fountain plays in the inner courtyard.

Rathaus Superb

We were told the workmanship throughout the Rathaus is so superb that it can not be replaced today because craftsmen are not available.

Not far from the Rathaus are the lovely Alster Basins, two large waterways complete with swans and sailboats. Here you can cruise around and see, among other things, Hamburg's "Millionaires' Row" and some of the city's 50 or so foreign embassies, housed in imposing old residences of another age. Coralie had lunch at a famous waterside restaurant called the Alsterpavillon, where the German poet Heine once wrote.

Strip-Joints

A startling contrast to this genteel part of the city is the St. Pauli district with its notorious street, the Reeperbahn, lined with night-clubs, casinos and strip-joints. Beatrice mentions going with her German "family" to the oldest theatre in Hamburg, located near St. Pauli.

Several of the other Canadian girls took a night tour of the city, which included watching a strip-tease in one of the night-clubs. They came away gasping.

From Coralie comes news of yet another trip, this time to Denmark, where she visited Copenhagen's Tivoli Gardens, sampled a smorgasbord and made a pilgrimage to see Hamlet's castle at Elsinore.

Saw Sweden

She is immensely proud of the fact that she can now say she has seen Sweden (without explaining that it was from the coast of Denmark).

Perhaps the most telling part of her journey, however, was the trip back to Denmark.

"It's really funny," Coralie said, "but we felt so happy when we got on the German ferry coming back. We all like Germany very much and, I think, consider it a second home."

Time Off from Swim Class

Youngsters Get Instruction In Artificial Respiration

Youngsters took time off from their Colonist free swim classes Wednesday — to take lessons in artificial respiration.

With only two more weeks of the classes to go—directed by Marge Maymuth and her team of instructors — the children were given a booster lesson in water safety by St. John Ambulance cadets and instructors.

SHOWN METHODS
Beside the waters of Elk Lake at Hamlet Bay, where the daily classes are held, the children were shown the methods of artificial respiration.

Demonstrations were headed by superintendent Edward Thomas, who said: "Many lives could be saved every year if more people knew how to administer artificial respiration. "But even if you know how to do it, it's not good enough to just try it. Always call the fire department as well—and if you don't know the number, the operator can help you."

'Sunday Drivers' Free

SUDBURY (CP) — Charges against six long-distance trucking companies, including four from Western Canada, for breaches of the Lord's Day Act were dismissed in court here Wednesday on a legal technicality before the evidence was heard.

Charges against the six firms, of working their drivers on Sundays contrary to the Lord's Day Act, were thrown out by Magistrate Anthony Falletta when it was pointed out that permission had not been obtained from the attorney-general prior to placing the charges.

Section 18 of the Lord's Day Act requires that no action be started under the act without the consent of the attorney-general.

The charges had been placed by provincial police against Trans-Provincial Freight Carriers Limited, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; Arrow Transit Lines Limited, Winnipeg; Continental Express Limited, Edmonton; Dalewood Transport Limited, Hamilton; Kingsway Freight Lines Limited, Calgary, and Trans-Canada Highway Express Company Limited, Edmonton.

View Royal Candidates

Mini-Metro Stand Explained by Pair

The two View Royal candidates for the mini-metro committee Wednesday offered their views on what they would do if elected.

The candidates are Robert McLeod, a petroleum engineer with the department of mines, and Al Beasley, who is in the paving business.

Supporters of Mr. McLeod, who is at present at Fort St. John on government business, said he would protect the district's financial interests if elected to the joint services study board.

His supporters reminded voters that the members of the group to be elected Saturday will not initiate any projects, expensive or otherwise, but will simply assist in the formation of legislation to govern the proposed board.

"One of the most important duties of the representatives will be to see that the rules of procedure of the board are such that unorganized districts are not forced into expensive projects by the larger municipalities," he said.

Mr. McLeod, as a civil servant, would be particularly able to protect the View Royal district due to previous government experience, they said.

"We are not dealing with a problem of fixing taxes or spending money," said a spokesman, "but simply in setting up limits of jurisdiction. This will be a problem of organization only, and Mr. McLeod will be fully suited to do this well."

Mr. McLeod is a director of the View Royal Ratepayers and Community Association, and his immediate supporters at the legislative buildings foresee no conflict in civil service and joint board service.

Mr. Beasley said if elected he would adopt a wait-and-see attitude toward the joint services board.

"I could tell what my plans are if I knew what we were going to do. As I understand it we are to be an advisory committee," Mr. Beasley said.

He said voters could be sure he would look after View Royal's interests if he were elected.

"After all, I am a taxpayer here," he said.

He pointed out that votes on the council would be by population and that View Royal would have only one vote, but if he was elected that vote would be used for the good of the community.

Mr. Beasley has lived in View Royal for 23 years and has been chief of the volunteer fire department for 17 years.

He is president of the Colwood and District Softball League.

Mystery Blast Hits Area

A mysterious explosion which rattled windows in Saanich, Oak Bay and the city was being investigated by police early today.

The explosion was heard by a Mount Douglas resident. Three calls to Oak Bay police said there were three blasts.

There were four calls to city police. Two of the callers believed the explosion was from the sea, the other two said it was near Fort Street and Fuel Bay Road.

THE FACULTY OF HEARING

No. 3

Much comment is made about reading speed, is there such a thing as listening speed? Certainly. We have reading, talking and listening speeds. Listening speed can be simply defined as that speed at which speech can be heard and understood. Play a 33 r.p.m. record at 78 r.p.m. and you will hear every word and understand not one! Persons with impaired hearing often have a subnormal listening speed—so often they hear, but do not understand because sentences are made up of words, and words are made up of individual sounds, which give audible recognition in the same way that printed letters give visual recognition. The time space between words and sentences is used to make sense of these individual sounds.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address contains 264 words made up of 1,033 separate sounds requiring about 2½ minutes to deliver. The 1,033 sounds were uttered in about 1½ minutes, or at the rate of 600 individual sounds per minute—which is 10 sounds per second!

For those with impaired hearing, an assessment of listening speed is essential—you can turn your TV louder, but not slower! A good quality hearing aid without distortion and static is also essential to maintain adequate listening speed, and give comfortable listening.

By the way—do speak slowly to anyone wearing an aid—it helps so much.

Professional attention and high quality aids are available at the HBC Hearing Dept., second, Hudson's Bay Company.

Gas-Bomb Thief Robs Campers

YVERDON, Switzerland (UPI) — Police are hunting for a "gas thief" who robbed campers at a nearby site by blowing gas into their tents to render them unconscious and then cleaning out their wallets and pockets.

The "gas thief" used a gaseous sleep-inducing drug which is sold in little capsules by Swiss drug stores for self-defence.

Police said he visited 15 tents Tuesday night, stealing a total of more than 5,000 francs ($1,200).

The campers visited by the "gas thief" did not notice anything until next morning when they all woke up with a headache and bad hang-over, wondering why they felt so bad. Then, one by one, they noticed their money was missing.

One girl camper reported she had lost a purse which she had hid under her pillow.

One French tourist lost all his vacation money, 1,300 francs ($300). Other campers immediately started a collection for him, getting together a total of 800 francs ($180) so he could continue his vacation.

Police said they had no clues to the thief but said the type of gas he used was carried by most Swiss taxi drivers.

Globe Invites Applications By Printers

TORONTO (CP) — Louis Fine, the Ontario government's chief conciliation officer, met Wednesday with the negotiating committee for the striking printers of Toronto's three daily newspapers and scheduled further talks for early today.

Mr. Fine, unsuccessful in getting the International Typographical Union (ITU) and the three newspapers — The Star, The Telegram and The Globe and Mail — to agree on a contract settlement earlier this month, would not comment on what had been discussed or progress made at Wednesday's session with Robert McCosack, president of Local 91 of the ITU, and union officials.

INITE APPLICATIONS
The Globe and Mail carried an advertisement in today's issue on behalf of the three newspapers, inviting applications for permanent positions for experienced linotype operators, compositor machinists, monitors, paste make-up artists and floor men. Floor men are persons who put type together in page forms.

Spawning Grounds Readied

Pink Salmon Run Expected Early

ALBERNI — Robertson Creek spawning grounds are being readied for an early run of pink salmon, introduced into the Stamp-Somass River system in an experiment started several years ago.

Descendants of the fish hatched from transplanted eggs in the first year of the experiment are reported on their way to the artificial spawning beds.

This year several small spawning channels which had been used for coho have been converted into the pink salmon system along with a stretch of the main creek.

Some days ago, five pinks were noticed passing through the Stamp River fish ladder. Last year the main run did not get in an appearance until late August.

TRAPS PLANNED

An official at the Robertson Creek station said emphasis is being taken off coho this year and placed on pinks and springs. Last year only two spring salmon, both female, turned up at Robertson Creek. This year plans are being made to trap them at Stamp Falls and bring them to the spawning beds at Robertson Creek.

Pram All That's Left for 'Exile'

ALREWS, England (AP)—A little old lady who was cut off from her children 38 years ago has taken home a rusty but cherished baby carriage which cost her $376 in storage fees during the last 15 years.

She is Mrs. Hannah Smith, 73, whose eyes dimmed with tears as she told how the carriage was all she had to remember the three sons she hasn't seen since 1926.

Mrs. Smith's story was disclosed when British railways officials decided to close Alrewas station. They said a carriage stood for 34 years in the dusty depot at a monthly charge of £1 ($3) would have to be picked up.

"All my children used the pram (carriage)," Mrs. Smith said. "I just haven't been able to part with it—and I never will."

Mrs. Smith told this story to reporters:

In 1926, she was living in the Derbyshire village of Overseal with her husband, Fred, a miner, and their children—Mabel, 7, George, 5, Percy, 3, and James, 1. One day, Mabel was killed by a bus. Smith blamed his wife for the accident and ordered her out of the house.

"All I had was the pram and a few belongings, including my silver thimble, and a mirror. From that day to this, I have never set eyes on my children."

For the next 12 years, Mrs. Smith roamed about, picking hops, or potatoes, or working in the hotels. Everywhere she went, she pushed the pram.

U.S. Aid Sped To Congo

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four big U.S. transport planes with 50 paratroopers riding shotgun headed for Leopoldville Wednesday as the United States again began to step up its aid to the Congo.

Coinciding with this Pentagon announcement, word reached the state department that victorious Communist-backed rebels have ordered the American consular staff out of Stanleyville, a major city in the eastern Congo.

Rebel "General" Nicholas Oligan announced that his forces could not guarantee the safety of Americans and Belgians in their territory following the U.S.-Belgian agreement to increase aid to the Leopoldville government.

CALL FOR AID

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman reported to a closed session of the House foreign affairs subcommittee on the agreement.

Members of Local 6186 of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) voted 364 to 185 to reject latest Inco offers in a contract dispute.

Brian Koshul, union publicity chairman, said Inco will be notified immediately.

The strike, favored in a government-supervised strike vote last week, was preceded this week by wildcat walkouts while company and union negotiators thrashed out last-ditch proposals for settlement at Winnipeg.

Mr. Koshul said that when union negotiators arrived back at this one-industry town 400 miles north of Winnipeg Wednesday the plant was shut down completely.

He said about 2,000 men were on picket lines around the main gate and other access to Inco's $185,000,000 operation when union negotiators arrived.

Main installations at the site are the mine, mill, smelter and refinery. Inco here and at Sudbury is said to produce 85 per cent of the free world's nickel.

Cyprus Force

Greater Powers Goal

OTTAWA (CP)—Ambassadors of Canada and five other nations contributing to the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cyprus will meet today in New York to plan extension of the force's powers.

Paul Tremblay, Canada's permanent delegate to the UN, was called back to Ottawa Wednesday to be briefed.

The UN Security Council had decided the force should be used to help enforce the ceasefire shakily arranged among the Greek, Turkish and Cypriot governments.

There are, however, two important stumbling blocks, reiterated in the Commons by External Affairs Minister Martin in reply to opposition questions:

● Objections by any of the permanent members of the Security Council which can exercise a veto.

● The need for concurrence by the government of Cyprus.

Johnson and Pearson signed an agreement to establish the former summer home of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt last January.

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—

Cheered by enthusiastic backing of former President Eisenhower, Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wrapped up a new measure of Republican harmony Wednesday after saying he will "seek the support of no extremists—of the left or of the right."

Goldwater told press conference that he looked forward to "greatly increased unity" in the campaign as a result of having outlined his views on extremism, civil rights, foreign policy, and other issues to 36 party leaders at a three-hour summit meeting.

Sitting with Goldwater: William E. Miller, the vice-presidential nominee; former Vice-President Richard M. Nixon, and Governor William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania. Eisenhower said the "uncertainties" he had felt about the nominee had been resolved.

"I fully support the Republican ticket in the coming campaign," the former president said.

In a wide-ranging speech aimed at assuaging criticism of him by both Republicans and Democrats, Goldwater said he will "seek the support of no extremists—of the left or of the right" in his presidential campaign. The speech was to a closed session but was made available to reporters.

"We repudiate character assassination, vigilantes, Communists and any other group such as the Ku Klux Klan that seeks to impose its views through terror or threat of violence," said Goldwater in the speech.

In his press conference Goldwater refused to repudiate the right-wing John Birch Society because, he said, it was not on any subversive list.

However, Goldwater condemned Robert Welch, head of the society, saying he had been among the first to read a book by Welch and has returned it to him with the assertion that it should be burned because Welch could not prove statements in it.

"I told him that he had made damaging, ridiculous and very stupid statements," Goldwater said.

Goldwater pledged that if he is elected he will "use the great moral influence of the presidency to promote prompt and peaceful observance of the civil rights laws."

Victoria pasty substitutes for pie in sky.

Pie 'Undesirable' 'Such Crust'—Cabot

Pie in the sky doesn't last, movie and television star Sebastian Cabot found out Tuesday night.

The portly part-time resident of Deep Cove said he lugged a six-pound beef, veal and egg pie 4,000 miles from London only to have it snatched away by an official of the federal agriculture department in Winnipeg.

Mr. Cabot went through customs when his Vancouver-bound plane touched down at Winnipeg on a flight from England.

He brought the pie back for his wife who, like himself, is English.

"It wasn't the customs who took it away from me," he said. "They said I could keep it if it was all right with the agriculture department but their man had the crust to say so."

In Winnipeg a spokesman for the health of animals branch of the federal department said the official only followed "the law of the land."

The spokesman said the pie "was immediately taken and destroyed in the airport's incinerator. This is routine in cases of this type."

But Mr. Cabot had the last word. He was given a Victoria meat pie, which he seemed to enjoy.

As he munched it he said, "I'll bet they ate it themselves, magnificent pie that it was."

Is Paraguay Shielding Bormann?

By ANTONY TERRY

BONN—Reports that Martin Bormann, Hitler's former deputy, has died in Paraguay and is buried at Ita, 20 miles from the capital, Asuncion, are being investigated through diplomatic channels in Paraguay by the Bonn government.

The German ambassador there has been asked to have the grave opened if necessary.

Bormann, who disappeared mysteriously during the last moments of the battle for Berlin in 1945, was legally presumed dead five years later. Recently West German's senior state prosecutor, Dr. Franz Bauer, received information that Bormann was subsequently seen alive in South America.

Investigations by the Bonn government's diplomatic representatives into the Bormann mystery are being hampered by the refusal of the Paraguayan president, Alfredo Stroessner, who is German-born, to co-operate in the search.

Bonn newspapers reported last week that the West German ambassador was "brusquely treated" when he attempted to make inquiries about Bormann and another senior Nazi, the ex-Ambassador Dr. Joseph Mengele, who is also hiding in Paraguay.

Bauer said that the authorities suspect the report of Bormann's death has been deliberately spread by Nazi circles in South America to stop the search.

Bauer said a Czech doctor living in Paraguay recently reported treating a man for cancer who was believed to be Bormann.

West German authorities want Bormann on a separate charge from those for which he was sentenced to death in absence at Nuremberg in 1948.

Bauer has issued an arrest warrant for Bormann in connection with a last-ditch "scorched earth" order which he signed on Hitler's instructions in April, 1945, just before he vanished.

This ordered German troops

to move millions of German civilians into the centre of Germany before the Allies reached them and then destroy them with flame-throwers and bombs in a vast holocaust.

The order was based on Hitler's final statement that the Russians, by beating the Germans, had proved themselves "the master race," and the Germans, therefore, had no longer any right to live.

The order exists and is part of the evidence against Bormann here.

Oldest Post Office Closed

PORT ALBERNI — Mayor of office, oldest on the west coast, was closed.

At council meeting the Mayor showed books and ledgers which had been used at the Clayquot Hotel and store turned over to him by Mrs. Betty Farmer who had operated Stubbs Island Commercial Enterprises until selling out last month.

Accounts kept in the ledgers date back to the days of fur seal hunting on the coast when the late W. T. Dawley ran hotel, store and post office.

Prospectors and surveyors made up the bulk of guests at the hotel apparently, while names of early mining promoters were also on the records.

Mrs. Farmer, who is making her home at Tofino after selling her interest in Clayquot, had given Mayor Hammer the books to be kept for the new Consumers' Co-op building.

Valley museum said he is extremely interested in having a museum started in the district.

Cause of the fire is unknown. All the Bruneau's clothing and personal effects were lost in the fire.

The fire was out of control when it was first noticed by a workman on his way to the new Consumers' Co-op building.

Co-op Man

Pioneer Farmer
Still Busy

By KLAUS MUENTZ

DUNCAN — For almost 19 years William Robert Barker, a veteran of two wars, has been associated with the Cowichan Agricultural Society. Twice in his life he went to war for his native Canada, and twice upon return he decided to serve agriculture.

At the age of 19, in 1914, the Gravenhurst, Ont., boy joined the 1st Field Ambulance at Calgary, and as an orderly he experienced war at its grimmest in France and Belgium.

BOUGHT FARM
Although not born on a farm he yearned to have his own place, and returning to Canada in the spring of 1919, Mr. Barker bought 320 acres at Lacombe in central Alberta.

Very early he realized that, especially in agriculture, a united group can achieve more.

"Collectively man can do what, as an individual, he never could accomplish," became his guiding words, and on two occasions he helped pioneer co-operatives.

Several years before the Wall Street collapse caused world-wide financial instability, Mr. Barker, together with 300 other Alberta dairy farmers, took over a dairy at Alix, near Lacombe.

BUTTER PLANT
By 1931 this same co-operative enterprise, the Central Alberta Dairy Pool, dwarfed similar profit organizations and had the biggest butter plant under one roof in Canada. The annual production at that time was 1,250,000 pounds of butter.

Today the Central Alberta Dairy Pool of which Mr. Barker once was vice-president is a multi-million-dollar operation owned by farmers whose wealth was created by their own initiative.

He strongly believes Vancouver Island farmers could easily accomplish the same success if they had the foresight to realize the co-operative idea. He says this idea does not cripple personal initiative, but channels all efforts into one common goal.

RESPONSIBILITY
Mr. Barker feels, "all primary producers have a responsibility to deliver their products to the consumer in a first class condition at a reasonable price, benefitting not only the consumer but themselves as well."

While still a member of the Central Alberta Dairy Pool executive in 1931, he went to Vancouver to organize a new market, and in not less than a year sold 1,000,000 pounds of butter.

The West Coast, however, did not let him go free. The same year he returned to his farm accompanied by his B.C. bride.

When during the hungry thirties the Alberta Dairy Pool was formed, Mr. Barker joined wholeheartedly as a member. With enthusiasm he proves his point about co-operation. The Alberta Wheat Pool not so long ago was one of the organizations which enabled Canada to make large wheat sales to foreign countries.

At the outbreak of the Second World War, he enlisted again, and until 1945, when he finally became the secretary of the Cowichan Agricultural Society, he served with the military hospital in Victoria.

FALL FAIR
Mr. Barker, since coming here, also was a secretary of the Cowichan Fall Fair until 1952, and a secretary of the Community Centre. From rock bottom he learned his second trade, artificial insemination, technician, and today the Artificial Insemination Centre at Duncan, under his direction with three other technicians, is one of the best in the entire province.

Although his looks and his movements belie his age, he feels he is just a little bit too old for farming.

He said he can serve farmers now much better with the AIC, and his remarkable experience he once gained as a farmer and agent follower of the co-operation idea.

Former heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano spent one day last week fishing off Stuart Island near Campbell River and took his quota of fish. His guide was Ted Davis.

Youngsters Get Instruction In Artificial Respiration

Youngsters took time off from their Colonist free swim classes Wednesday — to take lessons in artificial respiration.

With only two more weeks of the classes to go—directed by Margie Nayamith and her team of instructors—the children were given a booster lesson in water safety by St. John Ambulance cadets and instructors.

SHOWN METHODS

Beside the waters of Elk Lake at Hamsterley Beach, where the daily classes are held, the children were shown the methods of artificial respiration.

Demonstrations were headed by superintendent Edward Thomas, who said: "Many lives could be saved every year if more people knew how to administer artificial respiration. "But even if you know how to do it, it's not good enough to just try it. Always call the fire department as well—and if you don't know the number, the operator can help you."

U.S. Action Condemned

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo NDP Constituency Club at a special meeting Tuesday condemned the U.S. air attacks on North Viet Nam.

Reg Young, president of the club, said the club heartily endorsed the stand taken by federal New Democratic Party leader Tommy Douglas in the House of Commons opposing the American policy.

"The acquiescence of a few Western countries in giving the rubber-stamp treatment to this dangerous U.S. policy is alarming," said Mr. Young.

He told club members that the U.S. policy had been of meddling interference with the internal affairs of Viet Nam, including the defoliation of jungles and the forcible moving of entire villages.

Mr. Young said "The outcome of this policy is now threatening the peace of the entire world."

He added, "Any nation that endorses this unrealistic policy can only jeopardize its image to the peaceful nations of the world."

ALREWAS, England (AP)—A little old lady who was cut off from her children 38 years ago has taken home a rusty but cherished baby carriage which cost her $576 in storage fees during the last 16 years.

She is Mrs. Hannah Smith, 73, whose sad eyes dimmed with tears as she told how the carriage was all she had to remember the three sons she hasn't seen since 1926.

Mrs. Smith's story was disclosed when British railways officials decided to close Alrewas station. They said a carriage stood for 16 years in the dusty depot at a monthly charge of £1 ($3) would have to be picked up.

"All my children used the pram (carriage)," Mrs. Smith said. "I just haven't been able to part with it—and I never will."

Mrs. Smith told this story to reporters:

In 1926, she was living in the Derbyshire village of Overseal with her husband, Fred, a miner, and their children—Mabel, 7, George, 5, Percy, 3, and James, 1. One day, Mabel was killed by a bus. Smith blamed his wife for the accident and ordered her out of the house.

"All I had was the pram and a few belongings, including my silver thimble, and a mirror. From that day to this, I have never set eyes on my children."

For the next 12 years, Mrs. Smith roamed about, picking hops, or potatoes, or working in the fields. Everywhere she went, she pushed the pram.

Space Signal Received

STOCKHOLM (Reuters)—Finnish radio stations Wednesday night picked up signals on a frequency used by Russian spacecraft, it was reported here.

There have been persistent rumors in Moscow that a group of three cosmonauts will be launched into space in the near future.

U.S. Troops

CONGO SENT AID

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four big U.S. transport planes with 50 paratroopers riding shotgun headed for Leopoldville Wednesday as the United States again began to step up its aid to the Congo.

Coincident with this Pentagon announcement, word reached the state department that victorious Communist-backed rebels have ordered the American consular staff out of Stanleyville, a major city in the eastern Congo.

their territory following the U.S.-Belgian agreement to increase aid to the Leopoldville government.

CALL FOR AID

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman reported to a closed session of the House foreign affairs subcommittee on the agreement, which calls for more U.S. economic help and military assistance including trucks, jeeps and transport planes.

G. Mennen Williams, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, hurried off to Leopoldville Tuesday night to work out arrangements.

COULD FALL TO ANARCHY

In the view of high U.S. officials, the Congo could fall to anarchy or to the Communists unless faster counter-measures are taken.

With substantial U.S. backing the United Nations went into the Congo in 1960 when the then newborn country was torn by revolution. UN troops pulled out last July 1, and once again turbulence set in. Communist-backed rebels have seized large chunks of the eastern Congo.

NEW INSTALLMENT

The four U.S. Air Force C-130 planes now on their way to Leopoldville are an installment in the increased aid to keep the central government from falling apart. Officials declined to say just how big a military-economic aid program is being shaped up.

NOT FOR COMBAT

Aboard the craft which took off from Pope Air Force Base, N.C., Tuesday night were 50 paratroopers and 56 air force personnel including plane crews and maintenance men.

U.S. sources stressed that the American troops would be used only to protect U.S. property, not for combat.

2,000 Pickets

Nickel Strike Is On

THOMPSON, Man (CP)—A union spokesman said Wednesday night a strike has become official at the International Nickel Company of Canada plant here.

Members of Local 6166 of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA) voted 864 to 188 to reject latest Inco offers in a contract dispute.

Brian Koshul, union publicity chairman, said Inco will be notified immediately.

The strike, favored in a government-supervised strike vote last week, was preceded this week by wildcat walkouts while company and union negotiators thrashed out last-ditch proposals for settlement at Winnipeg.

Mr. Koshul said that when union negotiators arrived back at this one-industry town 400 miles north of Winnipeg Wednesday the plant was shut down completely.

He said about 2,000 men were on picket lines around the main gate and other accesses to Inco's $185,000,000 operation when union negotiators arrived.

Cyprus Force

Greater Powers Goal

OTTAWA (CP)—Ambassadors of Canada and five other nations participating to the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cyprus will meet today in New York to plan extension of the force's powers.

Paul Tremblay, Canada's permanent delegate to the UN, was called back to Ottawa Wednesday to be briefed.

The UN Security Council had decided the force should be used to help enforce the ceasefire shakily arranged among the Greek, Turkish and Cypriot governments.

There are, however, two important stumbling blocks, reiterated in the Commons by External Affairs Minister Martin in reply to opposition questions:

● Objections by any of the permanent members of the Security Council which can exercise a veto.

● The need for consensus by the government of Cyprus.

Breaks Party Ranks

Tory Opposes Vote on Flag

OTTAWA (CP)—The contentious debate on the proposed maple leaf flag resumed in the Commons Wednesday with a solid phalanx of Conservative spokesmen accusing the minority Liberal government of trying to ram it down the throats of Parliament and the public.

However, one Western Conservative—Drummond Clancy, Yorkton—broke ranks with his party and declared he would vote against Opposition Leader Diefenbaker's amendment calling for a national plebiscite on the flag issue.

Mr. Clancy said he had seen the bitterness caused by previous plebiscites. But he added a word of warning that many Westerners will not be pushed around by a minority in Quebec and would—if compelled to—readily join the United States.

"Don't drive the West too deep," he said.

Debate was resumed for the first time on the proposed flag—three red maple leaves on a white background—since Aug. 2, Wednesday's speeches centered on Mr. Diefenbaker's amendment.

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—

Cheered by enthusiastic backing of former President Eisenhower, Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater wrapped up a new measure of Republican harmony Wednesday after saying he will "seek the support of no extremists—of the left or of the right."

Goldwater told press conference that he looked forward to "greatly increased unity" in the campaign as a result of having outlined his views on extremism, civil rights, foreign policy, and other issues to 25 party leaders at a three-hour summit meeting.

Sitting with Goldwater: William E. Miller, the vice-presidential nominee; former vice-president Richard Nixon, and Governor William W. Scrantom of Pennsylvania. Eisenhower said the "uncertainty" he had felt about the nominee had been resolved.

"I fully support the Republican ticket in the coming campaign," the former president said.

In a wide-ranging speech aimed at answering criticism of him by both Republicans and Democrats, Goldwater said he will "seek the support of no extremists—of the left or of the right" in his presidential campaign. The speech was to a closed session but was made available to reporters.

"We repudiate character assassinations, vigilantes, Communists and any other group such as the Ku Klux Klan that seeks to impose its views through terror or threat of violence," said Goldwater in the speech.

In his press conference Goldwater refused to repudiate the right-wing John Birch Society because, he said, it was not on any subversive list.

However, Goldwater condemned Robert Welch, head of the society, saying he had been among the first to read a book by Welch and has returned it to him with the assertion that it should be burned because Welch could not prove statements in it.

"I told him that he had made damaging, ridiculous and very stupid statements," Goldwater said.

Goldwater pledged that if he is elected he will "use the great moral influence of the presidency to promote prompt and peaceful observance of the civil rights laws."

Bormann

Is Paraguay Shielding Bormann?

By ANTONY TERRY

BONN—Reports that Martin Bormann, Hitler's former deputy, has died in Paraguay and is buried at Ita, 20 miles from the capital, Asuncion, are being investigated through diplomatic channels in Paraguay by the Bonn government.

The German ambassador there has been asked to have the grave opened if necessary. Bormann, who disappeared mysteriously during the last moments of the battle for Berlin in 1945, was legally presumed dead nine years later.

Recently West German's senior state prosecutor, Dr. Franz Bauer, received information that Bormann was subsequently seen alive in South America.

Investigations by the Bonn government's diplomatic representatives into the Bormann mystery are being hampered by the refusal of the Paraguayan president, Alfredo Stroessner, who is German-born, to co-operate in the search.

Bonn newspapers reported last week that the West German ambassador was "bravely treated" when he attempted to make inquiries about Bormann and another senior Nazi, the ex-Auschwitz Dr. Joseph Mengele, who is also hiding in Paraguay.

Bauer said that the authorities suspect the report of Bormann's death has been deliberately spread by Nazi circles in South America to stop the search.

Bauer said a Czech doctor living in Paraguay recently

reported treating a man for cancer who was believed to be Bormann.

West German authorities want Bormann on a separate charge from those for which he was sentenced to death in absence at Nuremberg in 1946.

Bauer has issued an arrest warrant for Bormann in connection with a last-ditch "scorched earth" order which he signed on Hitler's instructions in April, 1945, just before he vanished.

This ordered German troops

to move millions of German civilians into the centre of Germany before the Allies reached them and then destroy them with flame-throwers and bombs in a vast holocaust.

The order was based on Hitler's final statement that the Russians by proving the Germans, had bested themselves "the master race," and the Germans, therefore, had no longer any right to live.

The order exists and is part of the evidence against Bormann here.
